Government Turns Back Railroads To Owners

Vinson Approves Pay Rise Accord; 'Books Are Intact,' Stimson Reports

By Ben W. Gilbert

The War Department terminated operation of the Nation's railroad system as of last midnight after Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson approved a 9-to-11-cent wage increase agreement covering the 1,100,000 nonoperating employes.

President Roosevelt announced at his press conference that the railroad dispute was settled and released the text of a letter to War Secretary Henry L. Stimson directing him to "promptly return the railroads to their owners."

Stimson announced that he was turning the roads back "with their books intact."

"In other words," Stimson said, "from a financial standpoint, the War Department will never have been in the railroad business at all. We will owe the carriers nothing; they will owe us nothing. Stipulations to this effect have been prepared and will be presented to each railroad for signature."

Terms of the Settlement

The pact was signed early yesterday after a series of conferences during the last few days, making unnecessary any action by the special presidential emergency board appointed to recommend a settlement. The board will meet today, however, to work out application of the agreement to a number of short-line railroads which were not covered by the pact.

The adjustment superimposes an allowance in lieu of time-and-a-half after 40 hours on top of a 10-to-4-cent sliding scale award previously granted, but never put into effect.

Workers receiving less than 47 cents an hour will be boosted 11 cents, including 10 cents under the sliding scale and 1 cent in lieu of overtime. Those receiving 47 cents, but less than 57 cents will get a total boost of 10 cents, including 1 cent for overtime. Workers receiving 57 cents or more will receive a flat 9-cent increase, part

7 'Railroad Colonels' Have One More Task

The seven railroad executives who donned uniforms of Army colonels on December 27 to assist the War Department in running the Nation's railroads received one last assignment as Federal control was terminated—to secure "quit claims" from the railroads releasing the Government of liability.

When this is done, the "colonels" will be retired and returned to civilian life, a War Department official said.

2 Bus Line Pay Rises Rejected, Third Granted

The National War Labor Board, with labor members dissenting, yesterday denied 5-cent hourly wage increase, sought in union-management agreements for the 4000 employes of the Capital Transit Co. and the Arlington, Barcroft & Washington Transportation Co., while it unanimously granted 7 cents to the 250 lower-paid workers of the Arnold-operated Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co.

At the same time, the board held out to transit workers the hope for eventual upward adjustment of wages by its recommendation to the companies to devise a bonus system.

The WLB recommended "that the parties negotiate and present to the board for consideration a bonus system appropriate under the existing extraordinary circumstances. In developing such a bonus system, compensation for abnormal work and an incentive to meet the present emergency may be taken into consideration."

Union Asked 14 Cents

A WLB panel recommended a 9-cent increase in the Arnold bus case, while the union had asked for 14 cents. The dispute, which led to a one-day walkout on November 19, began when the last contract expired May 17, 1943. The increase was made retroactive to that date.

Involving some 3500 employes, the Capital Transit agreement was approved by the WLB last August except for the wage question.

In the AB&W case, which concerns 400 employes, the board approved certain wage increases, such

Accounting By Unions Kept In Tax Bill

Annual Returns by Nonprofit Groups Voted in Senate

By Robert C. Albright

Over the protest of organized labor, the Senate yesterday voted 43 to 34 to retain in the $2,275,600,000 Senate tax bill a provision requiring labor unions and other non profit organizations for the first time to file annual financial returns.

Already approved by the House, the provision compelling labor unions, under penalties for perjury, to state annually their items of gross income, receipts and disbursements was not subject to conference change, and will be part of the 1944 tax law.

Action came with defeat of the Clark amendment, which sought to strike the controversial provision from the bill.

Farm Cooperatives Hit

Labor spokesmen had charged Government prying into labor's financial affairs, and Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said the section would hit farmer cooperatives and many another organization now exempt as well as labor unions.

But just before the vote Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat) of North Carolina took the floor with an attack on "group power politics" in wartime that some thought helped to sway the vote.

Referring to the mine strike, Bailey called John L. Lewis, UMW chief, a "modern Catiline," exercising such power that "we do not dare grapple with him." He criticized the recent threatened rail strike, which he said left the Nation not knowing "whether there 150 persons, is used in the war, she said: "Should I pay this tax, all production of these important tools would automatically cease, 150 people would be thrown out of employment and our armed forces would suffer.

100,000 Japs In Virtual Trap, Carney Says

South Pacific Headquarters, Jan. 15 (INS) (Delayed).—One hundred thousand Japs are practically trapped on Bougainville, New Britain, and New Ireland, Rear Admiral Robert Carney, chief of staff to Admiral William Halsey, said today as he outlined an all-out campaign to drive the Japs from the South Pacific theater, spearheaded by a "surprise" offensive unlike anything in the past.

The campaign, promised Admiral Carney of Coronado, Calif., will include destruction of Rabaul and Kavieng, ringing the New Britain-New Ireland defense arc.

"We have 100,000 Japs practically trapped in Bougainville, New Britain and New Ireland, Admiral Carney said.

"The Japs are trying to evacuate Bougainville, which is only a liability to them," the admiral said, referring to operations now under way.

"Aerial reconnaissance shows that the Japs have lost all confidence in their ability to make effective offensive use of Rabaul and Kavieng. They are now unwilling to risk valuable combat or cargo ships since we have started 'round-the-clock bombing of the big bases for which the Japs are unable to maintain adequate supplies.

"We have showed them their strongest bases are vulnerable. It is obvious that our next moves will be the destruction and neutralization of Rabaul and Kavieng.

GOP Captures 2 House Seats In Pa. Election

One Post Has Been In Democratic Hands Since 1934

Philadelphia, Jan. 18 (AP).—Republicans captured two of Pennsylvania's 33 seats in the House of Representatives today, wresting one of them from Democratic control for the first time since 1934.

In a special election to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of James P. McGranery (Democrat) now an assistant to Attorney General Biddle, unofficial returns from 163 of 164 divisions in the Second District gave: Joseph M. Pratt (Republican) 24,910, William A. Barrett (Democrat) 19,329.

The other GOP victory was in Montgomery County, the Seventeenth District, where the Democratic candidate, Marvin B. Brunner, early conceded the election of Samuel K. McConnell (Republican).

McConnell will succeed J. William Ditter, (Republican) killed in an airplane crash near Columbia, Pa., last November 21. Unofficial returns from 109 of 191 districts gave him 11,830 votes to 2676 for Brunner.

Indicated Line-up

Ickes Drops Aide Pending Letter Probe

Interior Secretary Suspends Briggs, Seeks to Testify Before Grand Jury

By the Associated Press

The final chapter appeared near at hand last night in the mystery of the "Hopkins letter" which political opponents of Wendell Willkie published in an effort to show that Harry Hopkins wanted Willkie renominated by the Republican Party this year.

1. A Justice Department official said there was "no doubt" the letter was a forgery and predicted the person responsible would be "turned up."

2. Secretary of Interior Ickes suspended without pay his confidential assistant, George N. Briggs, 55-year-old former newspaperman who, according to Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota, interested himself in getting the letter published.

3. Ickes asked permission to appear before the grand jury investigating the matter. He said he knew nothing about it but "I do not relish the bandying about of my name in connection with a matter which seems to be as bizarre and absurd as it appears to be contemptible and vicious."

The letter originally was made public by C. Nelson Sparks former Mayor of Akron. It purportedly was from Hopkins to Dr. Umphrey Lee, president of Southern Methodist University, Texas, and was interpreted by some as meaning Hopkins not only desired Willkie's renomination but wanted to see Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas replaced in the Senate.

Hopkins, presidential adviser, promptly denounced it as a forgery and Lee said he knew nothing of it.

The names of Ickes and Briggs were brought into the matter Monday, when Langer read to the Senate what purported to be a series of letters from Briggs to Sparks. These made repeated references to trying to get the original of the letter for Sparks and said that he (Briggs) was in need of money.

One of these purported letters also said the original "Hopkins letter" was in possession of Ickes, who had taken it to Chicago.

Yesterday morning a police officer and two men in plain clothes came to Briggs' office and removed two typewriters. The Federal Bureau of Investigation declined to say whether this was in connection with the investigation of the letters, which were typewritten.

The Justice Department official who described the "Hopkins letter" as a forgery was Henry A. Schweinhaut, special assistant to Attorney General Biddle. He said he "imagined" Briggs would be called before the grand jury.

Sparks has never given any public explanation of how the "Hopkins letter" came into his posses-

Britain's Denial Acknowledged as Russians Recall London Article

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—Moscow gave full acknowledgement tonight to Britain's repudiation of peace talks with Germany but at the same time cited a story in a British Sunday newspaper as a basis for rumors that the Nazis actually were seeking a peace.

Pravda, official Communist Party paper, published yesterday a "Rumor From Cairo" that two British personalities had discussed a separate peace with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop somewhere on the Iberian Peninsula.

The British Foreign Office promptly denied it and today called the denial officially to the attention of the Soviet government.

Broadcast by Tass

Tass, official Soviet news agency, broadcast the British denial over the Moscow radio tonight and transmitted it to the Russian papers.

The broadcast of the denial, however, was preceded by this comment:

"The Ankara correspondent of the Sunday Times reports the representative of the Wilhelmstrasse, Schmidt, apparently had his tongue in his cheek when he denied rumors of peace proposals which have been once again attributed to Papen" (Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey).

The radio then quoted the remainder of the following story published January 16 in the Sunday Times of London (not to be confused with the Times of London):

"It is true that Papen has made no proposals, but it is untrue that no proposals have been made.

Proposals Made to Turkey

"Proposals were in fact made two months ago to Turkey, who refused to relay them to the Allies. Similar proposals were made in Lisbon and Stockholm.

"They are believed to have come from Hitler himself and have been based on the possibility of disunion between Britain, the United States and Russia.

"These proposals were: 1. Germany to retreat behind prewar frontiers immediately; 2. Germany publicly to renounce forever her claims to colonies, but to be given a limited free hand in the East; 3. Germany to scrap her fleet and submarines immediately; 4. Ger-

They Believe It

Pravda's Yarn Angers Russians

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Jan. 18 (AP).—Two powerful influences were at work in Moscow today—one, Pravda's publication of the British separate peace rumor, and two, Noel Coward's very British movie, "In Which We Serve."

Watching Russian reaction to the two is highly interesting.

The average Russian believes what he reads in his newspapers, particularly what he reads in Pravda, organ of the Communist Party. Most Russians' first reaction to the rumor story was anger.

Typical first comments were, "What an Ally!" "Aren't they ashamed?" "What a thing to do," and "I would never have believed it."

Three excited Russians came to my room following publication of the report.

Truth Not Questioned

They didn't ask whether it was true. They wanted to know, "Why have the British done this?"

I tried to tell them that the headline over the story used the word "Slukhi," which means rumor.

"Yes," they answered, "but did

Reds Shatter Nazi Defenses At Leningrad

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—Lashing out in the new northern offensives the Red army has shattered long-standing German defense lines west and south of Leningrad and is advancing in the areas south of Oranienbaum and north of Novgorod, Moscow announced tonight.

The two offensives, apparently aimed at clearing the Germans from lines which curl around Leningrad within artillery range of Russia's second largest city, were announced exactly a year after the siege of the city was broken.

The Russians gave no details on gains in either of the two areas and announced that the drives began "several days ago." Previous German announcements indicated that the drives began last Friday.

46 Nazi Divisions Lost

Meanwhile, an article broadcast by Moscow radio, said that the Germans lost 46 divisions or about 550,000 men on the Soviet front in the last two months. The article, by Dimitri Manuilsky, member of the Communist Party central committee, said the Germans also lost about 6000 tanks in that period.

Oranienbaum, about 20 miles west of Leningrad on the Baltic shore south of the island naval base of Kronstadt, has been in Russian hands throughout the siege of Leningrad. Although surrounded by Germans on the east, west and south, Oranienbaum and other towns to the east have been a bridgehead for Kronstadt.

Red Forces Advancing

Russian troops "broke through strongly fortified enemy defense lines constructed over a long period. They are successfully developing their offensive and advancing," said the Moscow communique.

4 Get Prison Terms For Wire Fraud; Anaconda Fined

Providence, R. I., Jan. 18 (AP).—Prison sentences ranging from a year and a day up to 18 months for four defendants, probation for another, and the maximum fine of $10,000 against the company were imposed by Federal Court Judge John P. Hartigan this afternoon in the Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. war fraud conspiracy case.

The firm and individuals were charged with conspiring to deliver a grade of wire to the Government that was inferior to the grade demanded by Signal Corps specifications.

The court commented that the corporation was "the chief culprit" and that the individuals were swayed "by blind loyalty to the corporation and did not seem to appreciate the loyalty they owed the United States."

William H. Morley and Jacob Eagleson, former and present managers, respectively, of the company's Pawtucket plant, were sentenced to 18 months each in prison. Lowell K. Morrow, chief inspector at the Pawtucket plant, was sentenced to 15 months, and William Eagleson, boss of the test room, drew a year and a day.

Bridges Suspects Teheran 'Secrecy' May Be Involved, Asks Senate Probe

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt, holding his first news conference since he was downed by the flu, said yesterday that he was as mystified as anyone else by the Pravda "separate peace" story.

Asked about it, Mr. Roosevelt said that all he knew was what he had read—how Pravda had printed a Cairo "rumor" saying that two British officials had talked to German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and sought to find out on what conditions Germany would make a separate peace.

The President said that he didn't have any more information on the matter than anyone else, and was just as mystified as anyone else. That was all he cared to say on the matter.

Bridges Blames "Secrecy"

On Capitol Hill, Senator Styles Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire, called upon the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to investigate any and all commitments which the United States might have made at the Three-Power Conference at Teheran. President Roosevelt has told Congress that he made no commitments there.

Senator Bridges blamed what he called the "secrecy of the Three-Power meeting" for the sudden Russian implication that Great Britain was sending out feelers for a negotiated peace.

"Now, as at no time in the past," said Bridges, "the American people and certainly the Senate must know the entire truth of the decisions made at Teheran by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin."

He suggested that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee should hear high officials behind closed doors, if necessary.

Scents Lack of Harmony

"Developments of the past 24 hours," he continued, "indicate more clearly than ever that all was not harmonious at Teheran—and if it was at the time, there has been a breaking of faith since that time. The Administration either hoodwinked the American people with secrecy, or one of the United Nations has suffered a change of heart."

Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont, ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, expressed the hope that an adjustment of the Russian-Polish boundary dispute could be worked out in such a way as to be satisfactory to all.

Secretary of State Hull told reporters that the American offer to help bring about a resumption of diplomatic relations between Russia and the Polish government-in-exile had not reached Moscow until late Monday morning. He said that unfavorable atmospheric conditions had delayed transmission of the offer to Ambassador W. Averell Harriman in the Russian capital.

Secretary Hull's statement apparently was intended to make clear that the Soviet government issued its weekend blast at the Poles before it knew about this Government's offer to help bring Russia and Poland together.

A U. S. Calls for Business Revolt

Vivien Kellems, War Producer, Balks at Paying Income Tax

Kansas City, Jan. 18 (AP).—Vivien Kellems, Westport, Conn., war industrialist, announced today she had not paid her December 15 income tax, and called upon "all business, both big and small, to follow my example and put aside postwar reserves out of their taxes."

The Government, she told a luncheon meeting of service and civic clubs, "is adamant in its refusal to let these men (war producers) lay aside a reserve so that they may reconvert their plants to peacetime production and carry their workers through this period. This refusal comes in two ways, distorted taxation and renegotiation. . . .

"It is impossible for anyone to emerge with huge sums of money with the present tax rates, but it is insanity to tax so that there will be no private business after the war. All those not financed and therefore, controlled, by the Government, will go into bankruptcy."

"I have not paid my December 15 income tax," said the manufacturer of cable grips for the armed forces who has been named twice by the National Association as the No. 1 women in industry. "They are still putting cold compresses on my accountant's head, but I have not paid it. One of the reasons why I have not paid it is because I do not have enough money with which to pay it.

"Normally I am a law-abiding citizen; I believe in obeying the laws of my country, but I am convinced this tax is a violation of the Fifth Amendment, probably the Fourth also. It amounts to unreasonable seizure and its ultimate effect will be to deprive me of my property without due process of law."

Busck of Jacksonville, Fla., and Washington, D. C., was commanding a flotilla of eight LST's (landing ships, tanks) which were attacked by 30 dive bombers and Zeros as they were unloading.

One LST was hit and its cargo of gasoline and ammunition set afire. Busck brought his flagship alongside, boarded the burning vessel whose crew had gone ashore. The boarding party nearly had the fire under control when three dive bombers returned to the attack.

Commander Busck was atop the deckhouse, playing a hose on the dying flames. He turned the stream of water toward the dive bombers and the first two planes veered off.

"Guess they thought I had a secret weapon," Busck said, "but unfortunately I didn't fool the third Nip who scored the hit that destroyed the ship beyond any possibility of salvage.

The bomb exploded below decks and Busck was unhurt.

Legislation to Draft Labor Slowed Pending Showdown

The House Military Committee yesterday took a back seat on National Service legislation while a Senate committee planned hearings that may extend over a period of weeks until "coming events" force a legislative show down.

Chairman Andrew J. May of the House Committee told newsmen his group had decided to hold Austin-Wadsworth National Service bill "in abeyance for the time being to await developments." He pointed out that Senate hearings will be available to the House group if it later decides to act.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, meanwhile, was scheduled to appear before the Senate Military Committee today in support of national service legislation recommended by the President as essential to a "win the war" program.

Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican) of Vermont, cosponsor in Congress of the National Service bill, said Stimson will be followed next week by Warren Atherton, new commander of the American Legion. Before the hearings are closed, he said heads of nearly all the armed branches will testify in support of the legislation, together with representative individuals from civilian life.

While Austin did not say so, it was known that many prominent backers of the legislation are convinced that once the European continent is invaded many legislators who have been cool to the legislation will grasp the import of the President's recommendations. In one informed quarter it was pointed out that armed service replacement needs are bound to climb sharply,

During his three-week bout with the flu, the President lost the tan he had brought back from his journey overseas, but otherwise he appeared fit and jovial. He was wearing a pepper-and-salt suit, a white shirt and a bow tie.

The President assured the scribes that he was no longer contagious, and he said that his physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, hoped that none of them were, either.

He said that in the past week or so, he had held a conference with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in chief of the forthcoming Western Front; Admiral William F. Halsey, jr., naval commander in the Southwest Pacific, and Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, air commander in the Southwest Pacific.

The President said these men had come from different sides of the globe to coordinate the war effort so that the maximum of pressure could be exerted against Germany and Japan simultaneously.

The article was very disturbing to all people I talked to. They got just as excited over the suggestion that one of their Allies would sign a separate peace as an American or Briton would over the suggestion that Russia would sign a separate peace.

I talked to other friends about "In Which We Serve," the movie of the British Royal Navy at war featuring a destroyer and her crew.

One should not forget that rumors have been printed abroad in the past to the effect that the Soviet Union was being approached by Germany to sign a separate peace.

Cassino Battle Due to Be Fiercest Since Naples Fell

By Wes Gallagher

Algiers, Jan. 18 (AP).—Hitler's Tenth German Army has withdrawn to the powerful Gustav Line, several hundred yards northwest of the Rapido River, for a final bloody stand to protect Cassino on the road to Rome, headquarters announced today, as American patrols crossed the stream north of Cassino and probed enemy positions.

French troops, swinging in through the mountainous terrain to the northeast, advanced 1000 yards and captured Sant' Elia, a village situated on the lower bank of the Rapido about 3 miles from Cassino, further tightening the arc around the Nazi stronghold.

Furious Battle Looms

All signs portended one of the most furious battles since the fall of Naples as the Germans put the finishing touches on their defenses. The enemy's fortifications on high ground around Cassino command the Rapido River crossing at the town itself, but the Rapido does not appear to be as formidable an obstacle as was the Volturno, which the Fifth Army forced with heavy casualties.

The American patrol that slipped across the stream just north of Cassino found the enemy strongly entrenched 300 yards from the western bank and withdrew after engaging in a brisk skirmish.

Canadians Attack

Preceded by a furious barrage laid down by more than 100 guns, Canadian troops opened an attack against German positions on a 1000-yard front in the Tommaso area, about a mile inland from the Adriatic end of the battle line. The action broke a fortnight's lull on the Eighth Army front.

Despite strong German resistance, the Canadians were reported to have made initial gains and to have orced a crossing of the Arielli River at one point. Dispatches said the attack was launched in clear, cold, weather, a relief from the almost constant rain and gales.

The quotation of the British official denial of Pravda's story was attributed to Reuters, British news agency, rather than officially. It said:

It appeared possible that the peace talk rumors may have originated with the Nazis themselves,

Story Denied by Berlin

London (Wednesday), Jan. 19 (INS).—The German Foreign Office denied yesterday that Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had been in communication with the Anglo-American Allies regarding peace proposals, according to a Reuter's Stockholm dispatch early today.

The dispatch cited a message from Berlin to Stockholm, carried by the German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau.

drive "broke through strongly fortified defenses of the Germans" and Red troops are "successfully developing their offensive," the bulletin said.

Novgorod itself is 100 miles southeast of Leningrad between Lake Ilmen and the Baltic. Last Russian reports said Gen. K. A. Meretskov was commander of the armies on this front.

The Germans themselves acknowledged their lines had been pushed back on both fronts, in one place several miles, and said the Russians were continuing their onslaught in both sectors with waves of tanks and masses of infantry.

At the same time troops of Gen. Ivan K. Bargramian's first Baltic front captured 40 more towns in the Novosokolniki area south of Lake Ilmen and east of Latvia. One of the towns was the railway station of Shubino, about 5 miles north of Novosokolniki, which still is in German hands.

Russian units met powerful enemy defenses in this area and captured strongly fortified centers of resistance.

"In one sector the Germans launched seven fierce counterattacks, one after the other, but were thrown back with heavy losses," the bulletin said.

Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's First Ukrainian armies also made gains in the drive on Rovno, capturing the town and railway station of Slavuta, 25 miles southeast of Rovno. Slavuta is on the Warsaw-Berdichev main trunk line and on the Gorin River. In taking it the Red army by-passed the rail junction of Shepetovka, 13 miles to the southeast.

The Russians also revealed that several days ago the Germans counterattacked west and southwest of Lyubar, 36 miles west of Berdichev. The Germans took back two populated places, but the Russians completely restored their positions.

The situation on other fronts was:

North of Uman—fierce Nazi counter-attacks now reaching the scale of those launched west of Kiev last month, but making no headway, with the fighting sector narrowed as the battle shifts from east of Vinnitsa to north of Uman. The Germans were trying to throw the Russians back northwards past the Smela-Khristinovka railway, which the Red Army has severed.

Northwest of Kalinkovichi—Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's troops advancing through swamp country bisected by Ippa, Tremlya and Ptich rivers; Ippa already crossed and advance units moving in on Trema. Izvestia said the Red air force held the initiative and reported heavy air battles in the Crimea.

placing even greater demands on the Nation's limited manpower.

In one House quarter, it was said that any fresh outbreak of strikes was certain to revive interest of that body in the legislation.

Senator Austin said only that he was glad the House Committee had left its decision "open" since he, is convinced Senate hearings will delevop the case for national service so thoroughly that Congress will see plainly the need.

He said the hearings will correct the "false impression" that the bill involves "involuntary servitude."

"Assuming a man was called to an essential war job for which he was best fitted, his local draft board would consider any question of hardship," said Austin. "He could take an appeal to his Selective Service Appeals board, and after that to the President. In the final analy is, he could take it before a court and a jury. There is no coercion there."

fighting in the Louisiana Democratic primary election for a comeback to political power, took pleasure tonight in the figures for its gubernatorial candidate Lewis L. Morgan when the voting machines of New Orleans poured out their totals.

In the face of fragmentary returns from country parishes still sweating over their local races for sheriff and other parish offices, the New Orleans figures put Morgan at least temporarily in the lead along with his running mate, Earl K. Long, brother of the late "Kingfish" of Louisiana politics.

They also had the effect of putting Representative James H. Morrison high up in the figures and ahead of Sam S. Caldwell, the Shreveport mayor.

Returns from 226 of the State's 1843 precincts (162 of which were in New Orleans) gave Morgan 32,312, Davis, 23,431, Morrison, 5309, Caldwell 4447, Ernest Clements, 860, Vincent Moseley, 513, Dudley J. LeBlanc, 576 and Lee Lanier, 293.

Returns from 200 of 1843 precincts (163 in New Orleans) for lieutenant governor gave Long 31,101, J. Emile Verret of Davis ticket, 15,474, Frank B. Ellis of Caldwell ticket, 9774, Gladden Harrison of Clements ticket, 1871, Carl T. Jeansonne, 642 and Sam Tennant, 1114.

Churchill, Bronzed, Fit, Arrives Home

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill, looking bronzed and fit after his recovery from pneumonia, returned from a 10-week absence in the Middle East and Morocco, and swung quickly into a series of urgent conferences with the King, cabinet chiefs and high military leaders, looking toward the zero hour for the Allied invasion of Western Europe.

Churchill, in high spirits, stepped from his train to a floodlighted London station this morning. He was not smoking, but soon lit one of his long cigars with old-time zest. He appeared entirely recovered from the pneumonia attack with which he was stricken five weeks ago at conclusion of the Cairo and Teherian conferences. He immediately drove to the House of Commons, where surprised members greeted him with cheers.

Churchill said he expected to make a statement on the war in the near future, but begged "some latitude" about the date. He then disposed of half a dozen minor questions, such as the demand of one member to know what steps he was taking to relieve himself of some official duties in order to conserve his health.

"I am obliged to you for your solicitude, but I have no changes to propose at present in my routine," the Prime Minister replied amid laughter. The House laughed afresh when Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson suggested that "we go off and drink this toast: Death to all dictators and long life to all liberators;" and Churchill replied, "it is very early in the morning."

He then drove to Buckingham Palace, where he had luncheon with the King. During his convalescence he conferred with Generals Eisenhower, Montgomery, Sir Harold Alexander, Charles de Gaulle and others, and the rounds of conferences are expected to be resumed here quickly.

Berlin said today that Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt was massing powerful German forces in the Rhone Valley and the plains of Paris, ready to be rushed to any point to combat Allied landings.

The Germans said these forces were strong enough to cope with millions of invaders.

Roosevelt Foresees '44 as Victory Year

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt in a telegram to the French consultative committee in North Africa said "1944 will be the year of victory," Radio France of Algiers said tonight.

Roosevelt's telegram was in reply to one sent him by the assembly.

Discharge Pay Bill Debated in House

Suspended In Letter Case

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
GEORGE N. BRIGGS

sion. Langer said he got the "Briggs letters" from Sparks.

In making them public, Langer urged action by the Senate Elections Committee on his resolution for an investigation of Willkie's 1940 nomination. Sparks, in a book "One Man—Wendell Willkie" has charged the nomination was brought about by a small group of moneyed, international-minded persons.

Measure Arouses Disagreement Over Amounts Provided

By the Associated Press

A bill providing a top of $300 for war veterans upon discharge started through the House yesterday amid widespread disagreement over the adequacy. Some members called the scale "niggardly;" others said higher grants might overtax the Government's ability to pay.

The legislation, emanating from the Military Committee, meets its greatest test today when amendments are to be considered, one raising the maximum to $700, another increasing it to $500—the sum the Senate voted.

Leading the fight for retention of the committee's $300 figure, Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky urged the House to keep musteringout pay apart from adjusted compensation and other benefit legislation which he said was certain to come later.

"We would have to open the doors of the Treasury and take everything in it" if servicemen are to be paid for their "services and their sacrifices," he told the House. Solely as a discharge pay proposition, he added, the $300 recommended by his committee was "excessive" and certainly should not be increased.

"Thinking About Election"

Representative Short of Missouri, speaking for Republican committeemen, commented that it was "tragic" to "see how some people fall over each other to show their love and affection for the former servicemen." There was, he added, "too much thinking about the November election."

"If you are going to take the stars out of the flag and put a dollar sign over them, God knows you could never pay these boys in dollars and cents for their service," he declared.

Short described the bill passed by the Senate just before Christmas as "one of the sloppiest pieces of legislation I ever saw," and defended the House measure as "a decent, respectable measure, a liberal and a generous measure."

The bill approved by the Senate would pay from $200 to $500, depending on length of service. The House bill calls for $300 for service in excess of 60 days and $100 for less than 60 days, regardless of where the service was performed.

Congress Called "Niggardly"

Representative Lemke (Republican) of North Dakota, sponsor of the amendment to boost the maximum payment to $700, chided Congress for being "over niggardly." His plan would give every veteran a minimum of $100 upon discharge, with an additional $50 for each month of service up to 12 months.

Acceptance of Lemke's proposal was urged by Representative Lane (Democrat) of Massachusetts and Representative Rolph (Republican) of California.

Rolph asked: "How in the world can anyone get readjusted on $300?"

Fish (Republican) of New York, estimated that the total cost of legislation affecting veterans of this war would exceed 50 billion dollars, including the $3,600,000,000 cost of the committee bill. In the last 25 years, he told the House, 14 billion dollars has been spent on veterans of the last war.

Germans' Line Of Supply Hit

Algiers, Jan. 18 (AP).—Even Flying Fortress and Liberator bombers of the Fifteenth United States Strategic Air Force have joined the Allied tactical air forces in smashing the Nazis' communication lines from northern Italy to the battle area.

Their object obviously is to starve enemy ground troops for supplies and reinforcements in advance of the big thrust at Cassino.

Fortresses and Liberators yesterday pounded three railway centers of Arezzo, Pontassieve and Prato on the main doubletrack line between Florence and Rome, leaving heaps of tangled wreckage, and probably halting traffic on the vital supply line, at least temporarily.

Early today a formation of RAF Wellingtons bombed railway yards at Pisa on the main Italian west coast line in bright moonlight. American medium bombers hit rail yards at Chiaravelle, Viterbo and Orte, and fighter-bombers attacked docks at Anzio and rail yards at Palo.

American crewmen were puzzled by the absence of German aerial activity. A Fortress pilot said: "We went all the way across Italy without seeing any fighters or flak to speak of. Something is fishy." Not an Allied plane was lost in the past 24 hours.

The Allied air forces announced that in the past week Spitfires and Kittyhawk fighters operating over the Adriatic had smashed two German invasion convoys which were participating in an enemy plan to seal off the Dalmatian coast and isolate Gen. Josip Broz' Yugoslav Partisans from Allied aid.

Warhawks yesterday scored direct hits on a Nazi ammunition ship at Sibenik Harbor in Yugoslavia, setting off a terrific explosion.

Tito Reported Wounded, But Back in Fight

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Yugoslav Partisan leader, Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), was reported today to have been wounded when his army broke out of German encirclement in Montenegro, but the time was given indefinitely as last summer, so it was believed that he now was back in the thick of the fight against the Nazi invaders.

The Cairo radio, which quoted the BBC Middle East correspondent on the report, said the Partisans suffered 5000 casualties in the engagement and added that a document later captured from the Germans fixed German casualties at three times as many. It is said that during the battles the Partisans had to eat most of their horses, and thus were unable to haul away heavy equipment, which they cached underground.

(One Cairo source said he was wounded in the upper left arm.)

The Partisans' own communique broadcast by the Free Yugoslav station made no mention of the reported wounding or of that particular engagement.

The Partisan communique said that in current fighting the Germans suffered heavy losses in one sector in apparent attempts to recover the Cetina River Valley of western Bosnia but succeeded in landing marines on the island of Brac, south of Split on the Dalmatian coast, and at Port Omis at the mouth of the Cetina.

The Particans last October repelled an attempted German landing on Brac. Tito recently announced that his forces had cleared the Cetina River of Nazis.

The western Bosnia fighting was placed in the vicinity of Glamoc, 55 miles southwest of Banja Luka. Violent fighting was said to be in progress at the village of Mrkonjicgrad, but Tito's communique said the Partisans were standing firm.

Jeep Pulling Power Increased 100%

Toledo, Jan. 8.—The pulling power of the four-wheel drive "Jeep" has been increased 100 per cent by the development of a "magic link" which enables two scout cars to pull four times the load previously hauled by one vehicle, it was announced here today by Willys-Overland.

The new device, according to its designer, Delmar G. Roos, Willys vice president in charge of engineering, "links two Jeeps together back-to-front as a single pulling unit, enabling them to haul artillery pieces weighing as much as 4000 pounds, where the previous maximum load for a single scout car was 1000 pounds." Owing to the small dimensions of the Jeep, he pointed out, heavy guns can now be hauled into positions that were previously inaccessible.

Baker of ITU Defies WLB on Printers' Pay

By the Associated Press

Claude M. Baker, president of the International Typographical Union, defied the War Labor Board to its face yesterday despite a warning that his attitude might block pay raises for his followers through any other channels.

At issue before the board was Baker's advice to local chapters of the union that they avoid use of WLB machinery, that they attempt to obtain from publishers the full 15 per cent pay increase permitted under the "Little Steel" formula, or strike.

W. L. Davis, WLB chairman, told Baker that if he did not "park his pistol in the cloakroom" and come before the board with what he called a reasonable and cooperative attitude "I'm going to recommend to the board . . . that the International Typographical Union can't get wage increases any other way."

Baker declined to recant, replying that "if you'll assure me printers will get 15 per cent I'll tell them (the locals) to do what the War Labor Board says."

"That's a fine American position," Davis retorted. 'You are asking me to guarantee you a favorable decision before you come to court. You want a guarantee of 15 per cent irrespective of what the record shows. It is not the policy of the board that the permitted 15 per cent rise applies in every case. It is the maximum. I have no intention to give any such pledge as you ask."

Baker's only concession was consent to appointment of a panel representing the union, the industry and WLB to attempt to work out a satisfactory dispute procedure.

The case came before the board after work stoppages had occurred or been threatened in Providence, R. I.; Newark, N. J.; Birmingham, Ala. The board contended the disputes followed the pattern outlined to the locals by Baker, first in July and again last month.

Davis repeatedly asked Baker "are you going to support the no-strike pledge of labor or not? Are you going to make the attempt to stop these strikes?"

Baker replied with a question as to whether an illegal strike would be held against the national officers and other local unions would be penalized for that unauthorized action.

"If the international union advises locals against strikes the board will not hold it against national officers or other locals," Davis replied.

Wayne L. Morse, public member of the board, expressed a stronger feeling in the matter, however, stating "we must hold the rank and file responsible for the actions of its officials as well as officials for actions of the rank and file." He said labor's own attitude had encouraged antilabor groups to hope that public opinion is turning against worker organizations and to prepare legislation that "will plague labor for years."

"If the ITU is to break the no-strike pledge," Morse said, "the Government must meet the defi."

Bill Would Lift Ban On Shad Sale Here

Representative Hendricks (Democrat) of Florida yesterday introduced a bill to permit sale of fresh shad and other fish of the herring species in the District during December. A similar measure, sponsored by Senator Andrews (Democrat) of Florida is pending in the Senate District Committee.

The proposed legislation was sought by Florida fishermen who have been unable to supply the Washington market with winter shad because of a 43-year-old law which forbids either the sale or exposure of such fish between June 10 and December 31. The old statute was originally intended to protect shad which came up the Potomac in the spring to spawn.

Strike Closes 79 Foundries In Northwest

Seattle, Jan. 19 (AP).—Halted production threatened major war industries in Washington and Oregon tonight after 6000 members of the AFL-Affiliated Molders and Foundrymen's Union went on strike, throwing 4000 additional employes of 79 picketed establishments out of work.

A threat to the production of Boeing Flying Fortress bombers was deferred by agreement of the union to permit aeronautical workers to pass picket lines at the foundry which makes Fortress wing spars.

The National War Labor Board tonight asked top AFL officials gathered at their Miami convention to remind the strikers of their "no-strike pledge and that the AFL Executive Council take the matter up "at the earliest hour possible."

WLB Telegraphs Warning

The National War Labor Board telegraphed the union locals and the Pacific Northwest Foundry and employes committee that the work stoppage seriously interrupted production of critical war materials and "must be ended immediately." H. W. Sprague, union business agent at Portland, said he saw little prospect workers would heed it.

AFL Council Assails Use of War Prisoners

Miami, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor executive council expressed concern today over the "almost indiscriminate employment of prisoners of war in competition with free American workers.

A council statement said: "This practice is dangerous and is calculated to arouse deep resentment among American workers. It cannot be justified on the grounds of manpower shortages or for any other reason."

President William Green, answering newsmen's questions, said a recent complaint had come from Wisconsin because of the use of prisoners of war in wood cutting. He also said the proposals to use them in railroad work is objectionable because of the danger of sabotage.

The council began discussion of some of the problems relating to the postwar and reconversion periods and the current cutbacks in production, particularly the unemployment angle. Large numbers of building mechanics have not been able to find work at their own trades. Green said that in New York City alone this was true of 90 per cent of the bricklayers and 50 per cent of the electrical workers.

The council called for representation of labor on all boards, commissions and panels of Government considering such problems; directed Green to call on all AFL central (city) bodies to obtain representation on local postwar agencies; reaffirmed its demand for labor representation at the peace conference, and agreed to prepare immediately to give all possible encouragement to the launching of a private housing program immediately after the war.

35 Lost as Ship Founders

Boston, Jan. 18 (AP).—Survivors returning to port on another vessel told today of their five-day batfle with a raging North Atlantic storm which ended with the foundering of the Army freighter Nevada and the loss of 35 men from her crew of 64.

Those missing included the lost ship's captain, George F. Turiga of Beacon, N. Y.; seven members of a Navy gun crew, three Merchant Marine sailors and four Army men.

The vessel ran into a gale and snow squalls soon after leaving a North Atlantic port and in two days was leaking badly.

"... gaining 6 inches per hour," reported the log as rewritten from memory by Capt. W. H. McKnown of Boston, who sailed as first officer. "Vessel very deep forward, about 30-degree angle—unmanageable—no rudder control," McKnown's log reported of the fourth day.

On the fifth day four distress messages were sent before Captain Turiga gave the order to abandon ship.

Two lifeboats, with 32 men in each, were lowered and the captain's boat, on the windward side, capsized as it struck the water. All occupants are listed as missing and presumed lost.

Three of those in the remaining lifeboat were lost as safety was at hand. While being picked up by the Coast Guard cutter Comanche, they lost their grip on a net slung overside and slipped into the sea and were not seen again.

Republic P-47 Thunderbolt Output Sets Nation-wide Production Record

"...more planes rolled off the Republic P-47 Thunderbolt assembly lines in December than came off the assembly lines of any other company producing fighter-type airplanes. This establishes a new national aircraft production record, according to figures now available at the War Production Board." The high-altitude, hard-fighting THUNDERBOLT is designed and built by REPUBLIC AVIATION Corporation, Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y., and Evansville, Indiana.

struggle."

"Design or Ignorance

"Either by design or through ignorance, the Government refuses to allow me to set up a postwar reserve so I may continue this business which I have spent 16 years in building. Not only that, but through a smart trick called 'forgiveness' . . . it tacked on an additional 25 per cent."

Asserting the pay-as-you-go plan proposed to tax her on a wartime inventory, work in process, and on money tied up in expansion of machines, she declared:

"If this scheme is deliberate, and I think it is, I would not be the daughter of my pioneer ancestors if I supinely submitted. If the scheme is not deliberate, but the inadvertent result of poor legislation, then I owe it to my country to point this fact out as forcibly as I can in order to help rectify this horrible mistake which will most certainly carry us right into the abyss of communism.

Calls on Other Business

"Therefore, I am not only withholding this money so that I may continue to manufacture tools for our boys who are fighting . . . and so I may continue to employ the people who are dependent upon this business, but I call upon all business, both big and small, to follow my example and put aside postwar reserves out of their taxes."

Noting that the colonists ended a tax on tea by dumping it in Boston Harbor, she said "This is a one-woman Westport tea party and I cordially invite you to put on your Indian war paint and feathers and join me."

The 47-year-old Miss Kellems, regarded as one of the outstanding woman industrialists in the country, attracted wide attention in political circles in 1942 when she opposed Clare Boothe Luce for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Fourth Connecticut District. Mrs. Luce, backed by the Republican State organization, got the nomination at a congressional district convention after Miss Kellems withdrew from the race.

Miss Kellems is president and owner of Kellems Products, Inc., founded before the war.

General Applauded

Said Bailey: "I am with that general, whose name has not officially been made known, who referred to the railroad strikes, as the papers, say, as a 'damned outrage." . . . It was good military language, it was timely, it was true, and it was in the line of duty, and I am with it."

Bailey charged that labor organizations "have so much power that this Government is in jeopardy."

"Think of our situation, Senators," he said. "Where do we put ourselves today? We have this amendment down to the point of merely getting information as to what these institutions are doing, institutions to which we gave the power, and which should be dependent upon ourselves for their existence.

"Yet they have become so powerful that we are a little bit inclined to tremble as we approach the sacred precincts of their might. Well, I am not."

Public to Get More Coffee And Chocolate

By Christine Sadler

More coffee, cocoa, and chocolate can be anticipated by civilians this year, according to the War Food Administration, which yesterday tentatively allotted everybody out of uniform 488 cups of brewed coffee and four pounds of cocoa beans as their 1944 share.

This would be an increase of about 120 cups of coffee over the per capita supply available in 1943, and one-half pound more of cocoa beans, WFA said. The coffee allocation of 13.7 pounds per civilian will run to about 80 per cent of the total supply in sight and the cocoa allotment to 72 per cent.

Improved Shipping Reason

Improved shipping conditions are bringing the coffee markets back to normal, WFA pointed out, and shipments of the beverage to this country's allies are expected to show an increase during the year.

Military and war service uses of cocoa will be increased more than the civilian use, it was declared. "Chocolate bars, chocolate beverages and other cocoa products are highly regarded by the armed forces as important foods," WFA said.

"Red Cross requirements of cocoa products have gone up because of an increase in the shipments of packages to prisoners of war. All such packages contain cocoa in some form."

Chicken and Egg Markets

Meantime, a report from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reflected unsettled conditions in chicken and egg markets, both currently troubled by "surpluses" and the high cost of feed.

Pricing of Lavish Furs Sidestepped by OPA

The Office of Price Administration decided yesterday that if you wish to buy a fur coat wholesaling for $8000 or more you and the merchant will have to work out the price without benefit of an OPA regulation.

Putting a price ceiling on sables, chinchillas and rare types of minks costing that much money is an administration and mechanical problem the agency is no longer willing to tackle, it declared in a short statement which indicated stratosphere pricing in the ladies' garment industry will henceforth be something with which the Government will not concern itself.

as reduction of the progression schedule from a 2-year period to 1 year required to reach full rate.

A guarantee of $35 a week for extra bus drivers also was approved unanimously.

Wage rates for drivers are 95 cents an hour for Capital Transit, 92 cents for AB&W and, after the increase of 7 cents, 88 cents for the Arnold lines.

The general increases were denied, the board stated, because neither Capital Transit, AB&W, nor the union proved that they were justified under the wage stabilization program.

The Arnold Bus wage boost was granted to "restore differentials between this company and the AB&W as it existed in 1940," it was said.

"Historical differentials" between wages of city and suburban workers played a major part in the arguments before the board, with union representatives claiming that suburbs here and in many other cities in the country actually merged into Metropolitan areas.

Can You Picture AMERICA without Police?

Today, we all owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to men and women in the uniforms of Uncle Sam's fighting forces. They're on duty today at the four corners of the earth and on all the seven seas—protecting our lives and our way of life.

And we musn't overlook the splendid job that other men in the uniform of our police forces are doing. Their "zone of operation" may be at home rather than abroad, it may be the highway to the next town rather than the airways across the Atlantic or the Pacific, but their job is fundamentally the same—protecting us and ours.

We can indeed be proud of our police organizations. Most of us have few occasions to call upon the service of our police forces — but that in itself is a tribute to their efficiency. They're on the job day and night whether we need them or not.

Some of us in the Greyhound organization, because of the nature of our work, have more frequent occasion to cooperate with the police than do many of our fellow citizens. For instance, we are in a position to see clearly how much the police of this community, as well as those of neighboring communities, have contributed to the safety and convenience of bus transportation. The aid these men have given in arranging the most practical and satisfactory routes through towns and cities is typical of their skillful handling of all traffic problems.

Greyhound's most important job, as we see it, is to make near and good neighbors of all the communities that our buses serve throughout the United States — and we feel that the able cooperation of police forces has made it possible for us to do this job with greater efficiency.

Civil Aviation Measure Killed

The House Rules Committee yesterday virtually killed the Lea civil aviation bill by postponing indefinitely further hearings on the legislation. The bill, subject of much controversy, is intended to revise the aviation code in view of prospective postwar expansion of commercial air transportation.

Committee members said privately the committee's action amounted to a death blow to the measure, which was approved last year by the House Interstate Committee after lengthy hearings. These members said no further hearings would be held unless opposing sides on the legislation could get together.

There seemed little likelihood of an agreement, in view of the sharp division of sentiment on the interstate committee. The major issues in controversy deal with the operation of air lines by surface carriers, such as railroads, and the amount of control over air transportation to be exercised by the States.

Representative Wolverton (Republican) of New Jersey, ranking minority member of the Interstate Committee, told the rules group at a brief hearing yesterday "practically every State" had protested against the legislation.

75 D. C. Men to Get Army Physicals Daily

About 75 Washington registrants will report daily this month at Fort Myer, Va., for preinduction physical examinations, first of which were conducted at the local examining station Monday. D. C. Selective Service officials estimated yesterday, the number will increase gradually in February and thereafter.

At the same time, draftees called prior to introduction of the new system will continue receiving the old-type induction examinations for the next few weeks. From 125 to 225 Washington men will be undergoing the two types of physical checkups at Myer daily, until all those called before this week have received induction physicals, according to estimates.

Although the first men coming in under the preinduction physicals were notified immediately of service rejection or acceptance, since they had already had screening tests, those examined after the first of February will have to wait two or three days for notification. The additional time will be needed for compiling blood test reactions.

Results on the first crop of registrants under the combined system are not yet available for publication, however, but Selective Service officials declared that the percentage of rejections would be no greater than for those under the old system, since men in both categories currently have had screening tests.

Men passing the preinduction physicals will be called for duty in three weeks to 90 days' time, after which the serology tests become ineffective and must be retaken. All will receive the usual 10 days' notice of induction, however.

Under the new procedure, which abolishes tests, those passing the physicals are sent home to await induction notice while those turned down are immediately classified 4-F.

Swordfish Rams Sub-Chaser; Just Misses a Sailor

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Jan. 18 (AP).—Somewhere in the blue Caribbean a swordfish is nursing a sore snout after a sneak attack upon a small U. S. subchaser.

Gunner's Mate Koloman Green, Chicago, was resting below decks on the subchaser when a sharp 3-foot sword ripped through the 2-inch hull and jammed there, not 3 inches from Green's head.

Ensign Edward Meister, Mills, Ohio, said "we had felt a bump, but there was no other indication of where we had been hit or with what."

"Man, you're on our team!"

"Your station deserves credit for a raft of our men clocking in on time. The way you keep their cars shipshape here is saving us man-hours—plenty—or we couldn't keep beating schedules. Our plant driver brings the office car here—to keep it readier than a fire engine. Even our laboratory scoffers rave about your giving their engines internal OIL-PLATING to hamstring damage from engine acids! You're helping cars live. Great stuff!"
Such praise from the war plant's Big Boss caused the Conoco Mileage Merchant to throw out his chest. His Conoco Nth oil...oil that OIL-PLATES...is even more essential for less essential cars, used only now and then. The unavoidable acids of combustion—mostly heated away, before rationing, by prompt re-use of the car—now loiter inside and threaten to cause corrosion. But you know of anti-corrosive plating . . . like chromium plating. Just as closely, protective OIL-PLATING is surfaced to precious engine parts by the "magnet-like" attraction that Conoco Nth oil creates synthetically. Resist acid's appetite for your engine. THERE'S NO SHORTAGE OF WAR BONDS
THE government needs to issue a lot of War Bonds to buy fighting tools for our fighting men.
No matter how many you now have—or how many you are committed to buy on any regular purchase plan—won't you dig down and come up with $75 to buy at least one extra $100 War Bond during the Fourth War Loan Campaign?
More ships—more arms—more equipment are needed more than ever to speed the coming knock-out punch.
The money you invest in War Bonds helps buy them.
No sacrifice is too great when you buy War Bonds. No investment is more secure after you've bought them.
Let's show Uncle Sam there's no shortage of War Bond buyers!

Home Front Morale

According to a news conference given by six Army nurses, one of the chief concerns of mutilated servicemen returning from the front lines to this country is the reception they will receive from their friends and families. After more than a year aboard the hospital ship Acadia, these nurses have observed that the spirit of the men is good until they are brought in contact with unimaginative and even thoughtless behavior at the hands of their relatives. "The important war problem," the nurses agreed, "is building not the soldier's morale, but rather that of their relatives at home." In fact, in some cases a serviceman's fear of the manner he will be treated even outweighs his desire to return home. It would seem, therefore, that this gulf between the home front and the battle front calls for immediate attention.

One way of meeting the situation might well be, as Mrs. Roosevelt suggested at her last press conference, for the Navy and War Departments, together with the Red Cross, to set about instructing the public in the best ways to help veterans make their difficult adjustment to civilian life. This is part of the larger problem of supporting the fighting front. Servicemen, though they grumble about our civilian behavior, know and see that our material support of the front line is prodigious. At bottom that doesn't worry them half so much as what we are not doing to set up a society fit for veterans to live in. In respect of the incapacitated, there is a fine distinction to be made between pampering a man to the point at which he becomes a helpless invalid and asking so much of him that he grows discouraged and loses his will to get well. It is common knowledge that we all recover our strength and appetite for life more quickly, whether the illness be physical or psycho-neurotic, if we live in a healthy climate of affection and realistic optimism. Surely we cannot afford to destroy on the home front the miracles of medicine which our Army and Navy doctors have performed under enemy fire.

More On A Mystery

A good deal of water has passed over the dam since Winston Churchill described Russia as a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma. Recently, and particularly on the morrow of the Moscow and Teheran conferences, it began to look as if the riddle had at last been read, the mystery solved, the answer to the enigma discovered. But the case of the Pravda rumor, which is causing such disquiet and indignation in London, makes one wonder whether we really know any more about Russia than we did before. The only thing that is clear is that for all the oceans of vodka that have been poured down so many distinguished gullets at so many Kremlin banquets, the old Russian suspicions of her Anglo-American partners have not altogether disappeared.

Still, that does not answer the question of why, at this particular moment, the Russian authorities should have seen fit to broadcast a canard the only result of which could be to stress separateness rather than harmony. The American capital is buzzing with theories, including those we suggested in this column yesterday. It is said that Russia believes Germany is on the verge of collapse, so that the choice has soon to be made of surrendering to the Russians or inviting in the British and Americans. The Pravda rumor may be an indirect warning to Russia's Allies that Russia will insist on having a say in the ultimate armistice negotiations with the Reich. But if that is the case, a more effective method would have been to notify London and Washington and, if that were done, there can be little doubt that the matter could have been disposed of without unpleasant publicity.

Finally, there is the possibility that the Pravda rumor has to do with Poland. Either the Russians may have set up a diversionary clamor to make people forget the Russian-Polish frontier issue or want to express displeasure over the publicly expressed willingness of Britain and America to mediate. Certainly the Russian-Polish issue, at least for the time being, has been obscured by the feverish discussion regarding the Pravda rumor.

We suggested yesterday that the Russians may be annoyed over some lag or change in the plans for the invasion of Europe. In this connection there have been some interpretations of the Marshall interview that the general felt that the hope of internal collapse in Germany might have been frustrated by American labor trouble. Did this come to Russian ears? In that event Moscow may have felt that in spite of pledges and detailed plans offered at Teheran, our hearts and souls were not in the invasion, that we were still hoping against hope that a German collapse would dispense with the need. At any rate, it is known that General Eisenhower was late in getting to London, though he has made up for his tardiness by his activity since arrival.

We do not profess to know where the truth lies among all these and many other conjectures. The only thing we do know is that the only one who has stood to benefit by Moscow's peculiar action is Dr. Goebbels. Not only in Britain, where the people have come to regard the Russians with faith and admiration and feel deeply hurt by the Muscovite suggestion of duplicity, but in this country, the repercussions of the newspaper adventure have been many and widespread. There can be no gainsaying that.

Lend-Lease As Hero

To date the United States has put something like 20 billion dollars worth of food, weapons, material and munitions into the hands of its Allies. No one can claim that this contribution, of itself, is responsible for the victory we see approaching. But it is no overstatement, perhaps, to say that victory would not have been possible without it. The battle which took place in the arena of American opinion over enactment of the lend-lease law during the first months of 1941 was certainly one of the decisive battles of this war. For lend-lease provided not only an essential weapon for victory; it provided also the pattern by which victory was to be achieved—the pattern of the United Nations.

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., until lately lend-lease administrator, was responsible, in large measure, for the efficiency and effectiveness with which this weapon was wielded. Now he has rounded out that achievement by chronicling it in a notable book—Lend-Lease: Weapon For Victory. The record is one in which Americans can take genuine pride. But Mr. Stettinius' book is something more than a recital of accomplishment. It is an exposition of the meaning and potentialities of lend-lease. "Lend-lease operations, as we know them now," he observes, "will someday draw to a close, but we know already that the principle of mutual aid in mutual self-interest that is embodied in the Lend-Lease Act must live on. Today there is more unity of purpose and of action among freedom-loving peoples than ever before. In that unity we can find the strength to build a peaceful world in which freedom and opportunity will be secure for all."

Mr. Stettinius recalls with candor the dark days when France and Belgium fell and the invasion of Britain seemed inevitable—the days before we recognized that the defense of nations fighting the Axis was vital to our own defense. In the year 1939 we produced 2100 military planes, most of them trainers. We lacked plant capacity to produce much more. The groundwork for the great expansion necessary to arm the United States was laid by British and French orders—and by British cash on the barrelhead until that cash was virtually exhausted. In those days we talked in terms of "aid to Britain." If we had not rendered that "aid," we should never have been able to meet our own great emergency when it came upon us.

The darkest hour came immediately after Dunkirk. Most of the modern equipment of the British army had been lost in the great evacuation. President Roosevelt, with decisive imagination and daring, rounded up all the obsolete World War I weapons in our arsenals—Enfield rifles, 75-mm. field guns, an assortment of machine guns—and shipped them with dramatic speed across the Atlantic. "Except for the rifles, which are still used by the Home Guard," says Mr. Stettinius, the arms we sent in June of 1940 were only a stop-gap. But they went to men who almost literally had no arms at all in the most critical hour of Britain's history since the Spanish Armada sailed into the English Channel." If they saved Britain from defeat, it is worth remembering that they saved also the great island base from which our assault as well as their assault upon Hitler's fortress is now developing.

On Bureaucracy

In the magazine section of the New York Times Sunday, Secretary Ickes made an eloquent but somewhat confusing defense of bureaucracy and bureaucrats. First he defined the bureaucrat as "a man who doesn't hold public office and who doesn't like the fellow who does, either because he belongs to a different, and therefore hated, political party, or because he insists on playing the game according to the rules thereof as set down in the statute books, or doesn't say 'yes' with alacrity before the proposition is made." We note, however, with some relief that this is just "a rough over-all definition," because Mr. Ickes goes on to praise the bureaucrat as "a steady, competent, if sometimes too deliberate career man who makes the Government watch tick." He suggests, or seems to suggest, that the only alternative to bureaucracy would be to publish "ballots as big as horse collars" and make all tenure in Government jobs down to those of Federal scrubwomen subject to the will of the electorate, "although how the electorate could select with intelligence and how the responsibility would be exercised, no one has told me." Finally, Mr. Ickes proves that Big Business corporations are also bureaucracies and would "rattle themselves to pieces if they were not."

We confess we are a bit bewildered by Mr. Ickes' logic. Put in syllogistic form it would seem to go something like this:

Bureaucrats are valuable people.

Those who denounce bureaucracy are bureaucrats.

Therefore, those who denounce bureaucracy are valuable people.

Churchill And De Gaulle

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has arrived in London to take up his post as commander in chief of the Allied Expeditionary Force. At Marrakesh, Morocco, Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, president of the French Committee of National Liberation, have concluded what is described as a "most cordial conference." The two events are not unrelated. When the British and American armies invade the continent of Europe, as they are certain to do before very many weeks have passed, it will be of cardinal importance for them to have the unqualified support of the French people. It is for that reason that the continued disharmony in the relations between the British and American governments, on the one hand, and the French Committee of National Liberation, on the other, constitute a real danger.

The point is that the time has come (it has, in fact, been far too long postponed) to stop treating the French as a second-class ally and the French Committee of National Liberation as anything less than the representative and the spokesmen of the French people. For too long the personal attitude of high-placed British and American leaders toward De Gaulle has inhibited a realistic treatment of the French problem. It is, therefore, encouraging that Prime Minister Churchill, now happily recovered from his recent illness, has seen fit to visit General de Gaulle and to discuss with him matters of common concern to France and her allies. What the results of the discussions were has not yet been made public. But there are reasons to believe that they have paved the way for a more complete and wholehearted collaboration between London, Algiers and Washington in the critical period that lies ahead.

Dangerous Merger

Alliances are as often the result of common resentments as of common sympathies. On this basis there may be substance to the new rumors that AFL chieftains, now meeting in Florida, are preparing to readmit John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to their fold. Like Mr. Lewis, they are very angry at the Administration. Some members of the Federation's executive council, again like Mr. Lewis, are more concerned with the approaching electoral campaign than with strictly trade-union issues. Moreover, they would like to bolster their strength against the rival CIO. These are considerations which make the proposed merger tempting.

Against them is the indisputable fact that the rank and file of the AFL has a lively distrust for John Lewis. Local leaders and delegates made this altogether clear at the Boston convention last fall. They insisted that a resolution inviting the mine workers to return be watered down to a cautious authorization of negotiations toward this end by the executive council. Since then there has been little negotiating and no progress whatever in ironing out the difficult jurisdictional problems raised by Mr. Lewis' catchall union, District 50, which has been a thorn in the side of several AFL affiliates.

One other consideration ought to have weight in the minds of the council members—Mr. Lewis' well-known disposition to rule or ruin. Readmitted to the AFL, he might readily do both. He is apparently dissatisfed with the isolation in which his withdrawal from the CIO left him. Membership in the Federation might restore his respectability. It would certainly afford him a wider scope for his demagogic abilities. It is not hard to see the desirability of the suggested merger from his point of view. From the point of view of the AFL as a whole, it is altogether obscure.

Sound Investment

That the purchase of war bonds is an act of patriotism is a point that needs no stress. It has been made repeatedly and endlessly since Pearl Harbor, and is just as valid today as it ever was. But the fact must not be forgotten that for the individual the purchase of war bonds also constitutes a prudent investment in gilt-edged securities that have behind them the guarantee of the Government and the resources of the Nation. And not only is the purchaser of war bonds insured of a good return on his capital. By helping to reduce the volume of money in circulation, he deals an effective blow at inflation—an enemy as dangerous to our internal security as is the Axis on the fighting fronts. In the last campaign patriotism seemed to be featured, and nothing else. We hope the good sense of investment in the Fourth War Loan will take first place in the present Treasury campaign.

ACROSS THIS SKY

O let this be again:
Star-flight of birds in sky,
And no torn sound;
Only warm smoke from chimney rounds
Rising in blue
With child and father laughter tunes,
Coin-new.

O let this be again:
(No sound, steel-rocketed; no naked cry)
Only star-flight of birds
Across this prayer of sky.

Complex Problem

By Mark Sullivan

Soldier-Vote Debate

BECAUSE SOLDIER-VOTING will soon be debated in the House, and heatedly; because in all probability it will again be debated in the Senate; because there is universal interest in it; and, finally, because there is much misunderstanding about it—it will be useful to set down the principal factors in the problem, in as simple form as the very complex situation permits.

1. Soldier-voting by States contemplates that soldiers shall have opportunity to vote for all offices—State and local, as well as Federal.

2. Soldier-voting by Federal action contemplates only voting for Federal officials—President, Vice President, Members of Congress. The Federal proposals contemplate an abbreviated and simplified ballot, to be sent to soldiers, on which appear only the blanks for voting for Federal officials—not for State or local officials.

3. ONE REASON why Federal proposals omit opportunity to vote for State and local offices is that inclusion of these offices would make the ballot, and the whole process of soldier-voting, cumbersome—and the main purpose and virtue of voting by Federal action is to simplify the process. Another reason is constitutional. While it is claimed the Federal Government can take a hand in elections of Federal officials, it is conceded the Federal Government has no power to take a hand in elections of State and local officials.

4. Some proposals for Federal action add a "permissive" provision about State and local offices. They say, in effect, that where individual States set up machinery to enable soldiers to vote for State and local offices, the Army shall cooperate in distributing State and local ballots to soldiers. This permissive feature of some Federal proposals is a weakness in the whole argument for Federal action. For if some States have the desire and the necessary mechanism for having soldiers vote for State and local officials, and if the Army is instructed to cooperate with such States—why not let all States conduct all the soldier-voting?

5. The answer to the last point—and this is the heart of the whole controversy—is that, as of today, some States have machinery for soldier-voting, while others do not.

6. MANY STATES, not now having machinery for soldier-voting, are hurrying to set up such machinery—in some cases by special sessions of the Legislature.

7. The answer to the whole problem can be put in two sentences: If it is certain that every one of the 48 States will set up machinery for soldier-voting—then the method by States is preferable. On the other hand, if it is certain that some States will not have such machinery, then the argument for Federal action is strong. Unhappily, no one can now know the answer to these "if's."

8. What will probably happen is that a large majority of the States—perhaps 40 or 45 out of the 48—will have machinery for soldier-voting. But apparently some will not. In some States, requirements that voters register in person, are embedded in the Constitution. To permit absentee voting by soldiers, without personal registration, would require change of the Constitution. For that process, the time is short—but some States are setting about it.

9. The States which will have machinery for soldier-voting—for State and local offices, as well as Federal—will undoubtedly insist that the Army carry the State ballots to the soldiers, and collect and return them. It is difficult to imagine such a State as New York, which has machinery for soldier-voting, willing to see soldiers from that State deprived of the opportunity of voting for State and local offices.

10. The end may be something like this: Soldier-voting by States, as respects States which have the necessary machinery. Then, as respects States not having the necessary machinery, soldier-voting by Federal action.

Russians And UNRRA

In the issue of your paper of Saturday, January 15, in Mr. Drew Pearson's column, "The Washington Merry-Go-Round" a part of which is entitled "Russians and UNRRA" were cited facts that never took place.

I am authorized by Ambassador Gromyko to state that there is not a word of truth in the above-mentioned part of the column.

Among other things, Mr. Pearson states that "Soviet Ambassador Gromyko dropped in to see Relief Administrator Herbert Lehman, former Governor of New York, the other day and said to him: "I want you to meet your new deputy general, Mikhail Alekseevich Menshikov." The Ambassador did not call on Governor Lehman, in fact the Ambassador has not seen Governor Lehman for at least five weeks, and, therefore, could not have had the alleged conversation. All the instances, described so vividly by Mr. Pearson, as I have mentioned above, never occurred.

The Ambassador will appreciate it if you publish this statement in the next number of your paper.

Regional Systems

By Sumner Welles

Sound Basis For Peace

II

IN MY preceding article I expressed the belief that if the preliminary international organization were to make provision for the inclusion of regional systems to operate under the supreme authority of a United Nations executive council, consisting of representatives of the major powers which must make available the force necessary to prevent war together with additional members representative of each region, many difficult practical problems could be solved more rapidly than if the new world organization banned all regional systems and functioned, like the League of Nations, on a strictly universal basis.

Take as an example the inter-American regional system, which is today the only regional system functioning efficiently upon a sound basis.

The peoples of the Americas are convinced that this system has been of vital benefit to them and should not only continue but grow even stronger. They do not wish to see it abandoned as a necessary prerequisite to their participation in a future world organization, essential as they may believe such participation to be.

THE INTER-AMERICAN system is based upon these great principles: the pacific solution of all disputes, recognition of the equality of sovereignty of all the 21 republics, nonintervention in each other's sovereign affairs, nondiscriminatory economic treatment, and agreement that any threat to the peace of any one republic is a menace to the peace of all of them and requires consultation with a view to joint action.

The use of force to prevent aggression or to control the lawbreaker is not provided for in existing inter-American agreements. It has, however, been generally recognized that in the event aggression against any part of the hemisphere was threatened from an outside source, the United States, to insure its own safety, and in accordance with its traditional policy, would utilize the full measure of its resources to repel such a danger from the American continent. In recent years it has been likewise assumed that the other major powers of the Americas would pursue an identic policy.

The use of force to prevent the outbreak of war between American states has, however, not been envisaged, either through inter-American agreement or in individual national policies.

Once a world organization is established whose primary purpose will be the maintenance of world peace, it would necessarily have to take cognizance of any threat, or outbreak, of war within the Western Hemisphere, and should it prove impossible to check the conflagration by methods of persuasion, the police of the world organization would be required to take action.

IN SUCH EVENT, to ask a blunt question, would we, or our neighbors in any of the other American republics, desire to see British or Chinese troops, warships or airplanes sent to the New World? If force had to be employed, would we not all prefer to see a strictly inter-American contingent used?

To ask a second equally frank question, if force has to be employed in the future to check a minor and local war in western or in eastern Europe, is it not probable that the European peoples would far rather see the United States refrain from sending American airplanes or troops to Europe for that purpose? And would not the people of the United States themselves most decidedly wish to avoid having to contribute their men and their military resources every time hostilities threaten to break out in the Balkans or in some other far-removed part of the world?

Generally speaking, the nations of each region are also far better qualified to deal with local controversies before they reach the breaking point. They are necessarily more familiar with the origins of such disputes, and the practical ways through which they can be composed, than are nations geographically, or racially, alien to the peoples directly involved.

A practical solution of these very formidable and basic problems would seem to lie in the functioning of regional systems, through which the nations of each region would assume—always subject to the authority of the international organization's executive council—the primary responsibility for the maintenance of peace in their neighborhood. Only in the event that they prove unable to quench a local conflagration would the international executive council itself be called upon to take action.

FOR THESE purposes air and naval bases must of course be made available in each region to the regional powers which, by common agreement and in accordance with the supreme authority of the international organization, are to contribute such force as may be required to keep the peace of the region. In similar fashion there must exist certain strategic bases throughout the world available to all of those great powers which must be prepared, if a major controversy is threatened, to prevent an outbreak of world war.

Notwithstanding these evident and practical advantages to be derived from the operation of such regional systems within a world organization, unless very powerful precautions are taken, both through the provisions of the constitution of the world organization itself as well as through the development of political and economic safeguards, such regional systems might well become, in Woodrow Wilson's words, "organized rivalries" and not the foundations for "an organized common peace."

The major safeguards would be the subordination of all regional systems to the superior authority of an executive council, representative of the major powers as well as of all regions, and the construction of such systems upon the same general foundations as those upon which the inter-American system has been built up.

In my concluding article on this subject of regional systems I shall indicate my belief as to the manner in which an executive council of the United Nations might most desirably be composed.

Nazifying The Army

In taking the position that the notorious Bolshevik attack upon Finland in 1939 and the subsequent raping of Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania by the Soviet troops were militarily desirable feats aiding the Allied cause and that they should not be judged from a moral point of view, the new official guidebook of our Army has embarked upon instilling an unethical notion of military expediency into our soldiers. The same pretext is used by the Germans to justify the sinking of Lusitania and the attacks upon the neutral countries of Europe. The stand of our War Department is dangerously novel in a democratic country, the German proverb Kriegsraeson geht vor Kriegsrecht, according to Oppenheim, being not even upheld generally by the German writers. Our boys are in this war, not only for the immediate purpose of winning it, but also with the end in view of gaining an everlasting peace. It will require considerably more than a new textbook to convince the American soldier of 1944 that the Russian attack on Finland in 1939 was a desirable thing from our military point of view. Our boys will never acquiesce in the type of military necessity which made it desirable for the Germans to overrun Europe, for the Japanese to subjugate Manchuria and for the Italians to conquer Ethiopia.

The peace of the world depends largely on peace in the Baltic. This great sea has seen peace around its borders only when her control has been in the hands of her rightful riparian owners. In the "good old Swedish days" of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, when Sweden and Finland controlled the Baltic, the contentment in the countries bordering upon this northern Mediterranean was universal. When Peter the Great of Russia reached for the Baltic, conquering the Finnish Duchy of Ingria in 1703 and establishing on Finnish soil the City of St. Petersburg, the foundation was laid for a danger spot to world peace. Prussia naturally found it necessary to check the Russian drang toward the Atlantic. The problem of the Baltic has thus been a major cause of friction between Russia and Germany and lately a major cause of the World Wars. The present Russian Communist regime, while cautiously moving its capital to real Russian soil, has followed in the footsteps of the old Russian regime, making attacks into the Baltic in 1918, 1919, 1924 and in 1939, when Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia divided eastern Europe into spheres of influence. When the Bolsheviks in 1939 attacked Finland and overran the Baltic states of Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania, they merely kindled the fire for a worse epoch of the World War, actually inviting a German countermove. The National Socialist troops promptly overran the Baltic states, with the exception of Sweden and Finland. By what possible stretch of imagination, one will ask, can the loss of these states be construed to have resulted in strengthening the western borders of the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics?

The attack of the small Baltic states thus proved a singularly poor case of military expediency and an unusually faulty vehicle for conveying to our boys in the Army the wicked Prussian doctrine of military necessity.

Political Capital

Senator Brooks of Illinois, speaking on the Town Hall broadcast Thursday night, expressed concern lest a political candidate or political party (meaning the Democrats) attempt to make political capital out of the successful prosecution of the war.

The Senator apparently considers it entirely proper, however, that political candidates and a political party (meaning the Republicans) should, as they already have, make political capital out of the annoyances and difficulties arising from rationing and price control, made unavoidable by and contributing directly to the successful prosecution of the war.

Bluestocking 'Menace'

By Malvina Lindsay

Schools Call Women

WHILE FEMININE spenders and party-goers are having their day in the headlines, many American women are quietly getting ready for their roles in the world after the war. It will be a world—as they well know—in which clinging vines, social butterflies, fifth wheels of any sort will have little place; a world in which many a woman will have to be the man of the family; a world to which every human being will need to bring as much strength and self-sufficiency as possible. Hence, women are flocking back to college, are enrolling in night classes, joining study groups, taking correspondence courses at home.

Educators report a new, eager, determined atmosphere in classrooms, even see a feminine renaissance of learning ahead. Regular students—two-thirds of whom are girls—are taking their college work less lightly; women who have been out of school have returned with serious purpose. Recruits in this mental home guard include lonely war brides, uncertain of what lies ahead; young girls who face the fact that neither parental wealth nor marriage to Lord Lochinvar can guarantee security; working women training for better war jobs; professional women sensing the opportunities ahead; yearners who have long wanted to finish high school or college and now at last are economically able to do so.

Answer to Hitler

Thus are American women answering the Hitler back-to-the-kitchen ideology. Thus also they may be alarming some jittery Fascists at home about the bluestocking menace. In fact, it does begin to look as if women were becoming the dominant mental force in this country—in point of educated population. More girls than boys annually finish high school. But so far, men have had plenty of edge in college, though women have been slowly stealing up on them. From 1935 to 1940, inclusive, women graduates of colleges increased from 39.66 to 41.11 per cent. For the next year or so the women's percentage will of course take larger leaps ahead.

One thing seems certain: the educated woman will continue coming to the fore—and more rapidly now that wartime upheavals have given her a further push. However, setbacks have never stopped her. In the little more than a century that higher education has been available to her, she has braved ridicule, social ostracism and rebuffs of all kinds in her determined pursuit of knowledge. An inspiring saga it has been—the rise of the "bluestockings." It began with those intrepid girls who defied the disapproval of a pioneer civilization to attend Miss Emma Willard's Female Seminary and the early day Oberlin, Mount Holyoke and Vassar Colleges. (Even in the 70's and 80's many a college girl on vacation had to work strenuously at being a frivolous nitwit, thus to assure potential beaux of her "normal womanhood.") Then there were the girls who as a penalty for excelling in their studies had to bear the opprobrium of "grind," and those who were regarded as freaks because they enrolled in medicine and engineering, and the many who had to escape tyrannical families to go to college. There were also the growing multitudes of mothers who struggled and sacrificed that their daughters—and sons as well—might have the education they themselves had missed.

Still Conceal Brains

Even in modern times women have not found the intellectual path entirely smooth. They have had to conceal their brains from suitors or husbands; they have been dissected by amateur Freudians; condemned by political demagogues; viewed with alarm by social reactionaries. Only last week Dr. Margaret Mead, anthropologist, admitted: "Every step a man takes forward in his career makes him more desired as a husband; every step a woman takes forward in her career makes her less desired as a wife." Moreover, the situation was never helped by visiting continental lecturers, in prewar days, pointing out the cultural superiority of the American woman to the American man. Now the setup is open to another "bluestocking" alarm, especially as men after the war are likely to go increasingly into technological studies to meet new commercial opportunities, presumably leaving women the copyright on culture.

However, women like men, are shifting their interest to practical subjects in colleges, although a large percentage still are interested in getting basic educations. Business and civic administration, technical courses, as science, mathematics, economics and foreign trade—all these appeal increasingly to the woman who is fitting herself for economic independence—even though her blueprints for the future include a husband and a home.

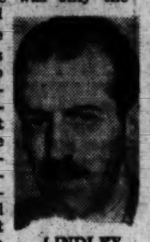
But even though the mothers of the next generation be better educated in a cultural and academic sense than the fathers that is no cause for alarm. In fact, it is all to the good. Women are the educators of men at the most impressionable period of men's lives and the next generation will need, and need desperately, mothers with trained minds and backgrounds of knowledge. The Nation, in its immediate future, will need even more desperately that its majority group of citizens—its women—possess all the mental stimulation that colleges can give them.

Russian Puzzles

By Ernest Lindley

No Sensible Explanation

THE PRAVDA dispatch insinuating that the British were negotiating with the Germans for a separate peace was only the latest of several articles in the Soviet press which admit no sensible explanation. Pravda's recent blast at Wendell Willkie was another example. Still another, which escaped general notice here at the time, was an editorial in War and the Working Classes objecting to British press comment on the Kharkov atrocity trials. As in the Willkie case, the Soviet press countered a friendly approach with a stinging rebuff.



LINDLEY

The Manchester Guardian, Liberal party organ, had commented on the Kharkov trials in this vein:

The exiled governments of German-occupied nations, meeting at St. James's Palace, London, in October 1942, agreed upon the objective of prompt and just punishment of war atrocities. A long year thereafter, an inter-Allied committee was set up in London to investigate war crimes. The Lord Chancellor, Sir John Simon, "expressed hope" that a Soviet representative would be appointed. None was named. The commission, therefore, started its work without participation of the Soviet government which "in its own way" took a course of "direct and rapid action." This was "natural," upon the part of the "first government to be able to lay its hands on war criminals." At the same time, it was to be hoped that the Soviet court "would not weaken the inter-Allied commission," for "the lead of a big power energetically determined about punishing war criminals would greatly further the commission's work."

THE YORKSHIRE POST, owned by Anthony Eden's family and supposed to reflect British Foreign Office views, was even more considerate. It also alluded to the Lord Chancellor's appeal and granted that the Kharkov trials of three German soldiers and a Russian traitor went on in a "somewhat histrionic atmosphere, not altogether in accord with our own ideas of the sober dignities of the law." But it justified the Russians on two counts:

1. "Much of the commission's work of inquiry, arrest and trial will obviously have to wait until hostilities cease and the promise of postwar action is not likely to serve as a very effective deterrent," (to continued atrocities in Russia).

2. "The Soviet authorities, aware of the fearful sufferings to which Russians are exposed in areas still under German occupation, are determined to make an immediate example of any flagrant criminals they catch. Inclusion of a Russian (among the Kharkov defendants) is evidently intended as a stern warning against collaboration."

If even a few Russians are saved from slaughter, the paper concluded, "the trials will have served a valuable purpose."

The Soviet organ's reply was a mixture of sarcasm and misleading statements.

It said it was understandable that the "Yorkshire editors can more patiently await the trials than, for instance, the inhabitants of Kharkov and Kiev, who have experienced the horrors of Hitlerite occupation."

IT DISMISSED the Guardian's "profound remarks" with a statement that the "sole policy of all the freedom-loving nations was sufficiently, fully and clearly expressed" by the Moscow joint Soviet-American-British declaration on atrocities.

In the declaration, the "sole policy" was "clearly expressed" but in a sense opposite to what War and Working Classes implies. The Soviet organ indicates the declaration provides for immediate trials. Actually, it calls for trials "after the armistice" and for causes made clear to the Kremlin by Britain and the United States before it was signed. The two powers reasoned that British and American prisoners might become the target of German reprisals for Russian executions of Germans. Following the Kharkov executions, the Germans threatened just that course.

In reporting December 31 that Britain and the United States had formally appealed to Russia to postpone further trials in accordance with the Moscow declaration, this column unintentionally erred. But there is no question of the concern with which British and American officials view the matter.

War and the Working Classes described the Kharkov trials as "only one of the first blows" against Fascist atrocities, implying that more pre-armistice German executions are in store. Actually, so far as is known, there have been no more trials in the Kharkov pattern as yet, indicating that Moscow may not be insensitive to British and American opinion.

However, the outbursts in the Soviet press obviously do not improve Russia's relations with its Allies.

Leather Shortage May Put Pigskin In Civilian Shoes

Impending shortages of leather are so serious that plans are already well advanced to utilize pigskin leather in civilian shoes, it was reported last night by War Production Board sources.

The new-type combat boot recently approved by the Army and now in limited use overseas requires more leather than former Army footwear. A falling off in imports of hides has also contributed to the leather scarcity.

It was learned that the leather division of WPB prepared an order 10 days ago which would deny to normal civilian uses approximately one-third of U. S. tanners' output for the first quarter of 1944. The production of one million pairs of combat boots in the same three months has also been tentatively approved plus manufacturing of enough convention-type Army shoes to maintain military replacement requirements.

Under the plans, pigskin would be used for the uppers of certain types of civilian shoes in conjunction with synthetic rubber soles and heels.

Dewey Holds Slight Lead Over Willkie In Nebraska and California Surveys

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 18.—Surveys of Republican sentiment in Nebraska and California show Gov. Thomas E. Dewey holding a slight lead today over Wendell Willkie in popularity as a 1944 presidential candidate.

The political tides in Nebraska are important because it is one of the States which has open presidential primaries. The situation in California holds equal interest for political leaders because of talk of Gov. Earl Warren as a possible vice presidential candidate. The California Governor has announced his intention of entering his State's primaries as a presidential nominee.

In gathering the views of Republican voters in California and Nebraska, each voter was handed a list of candidates who have been most widely talked about for the Presidency this year, and asked to name his present choice.

Based on those who named a Republican, the results for Nebraska are given below. The figures are not a poll of Republican leaders, but of the rank and file of the whole party. The survey procedure used gives proper representation to all shades of opinion within the Republican Party—the independent Republicans as well as the more rock-ribbed Republicans.

NEBRASKA

Dewey	35%
Willkie	29
MacArthur	16
Stassen	10
Bricker	9
Warren	1
Johnston	*

*Less than 1 per cent.

The California survey, conducted in the same manner as that in Nebraska, shows the following vote:

CALIFORNIA

Dewey	32%
Willkie	30
Warren	13
MacArthur	13
Stassen	6
Bricker	4
Johnston	2

Bill Filed to Give D. C. Its Own Money

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada yesterday introduced a bill authorizing the Treasury to transfer to the credit of the District nearly $11,000 it received from the sale of municipally owned property to the Sanitary Grocery Co.

The Commissioners recommended the legislation, which they said is necessary because existing law places in the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury funds derived by the District from sale of its own property.

Adm. Stark in London After Talks Here

Democratic Committee Fight On Walker Proxies Threatens

A fight is in prospect over the use of proxies when the Democratic National Committee meets here Saturday to select a new chairman to succeed Postmaster General Frank C. Walker.

Walker, it's reported, already has proxies covering more than 30 per cent of the committee vote which he hopes to use to make Robert Hannegan, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, his successor. However, the insurgents, led by James C. Quigley, national committeeman from Nebraska, plan to question the right of Walker to use the proxies.

Quigley and his group, a spokesman said yesterday, will insist that the new chairman be elected by the committee men and women who are present. The insurgents are reported to be behind Eugene Casey, executive assistant to the President, for the chairmanship.

Unless Walker is able to use his proxies, and a knockdown fight develops over the chairmanship, it's believed that Walker will be forced to keep the chairmanship until party harmony is restored.

Meantime, Hannegan is ready to accept the chairmanship if he's drafted by the President. He's prepared to resign from Internal Revenue. His political opponents are accusing him of being behind the move in Missouri several years ago to prevent the seating of Governor Donnell, a Republican, who was elected by 3000 votes. The State Supreme Court finally ordered the Republican seated.

In an interview here yesterday, Quigley said his group of farm belt committeemen would meet here Friday, the day before the full committee session.

"There's nothing unusual about that," he said. He added that he didn't know what stand his group would take, but the meeting is widely regarded as a "rump" session to plan Saturday strategy, to demand the resignations of Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard and Farm Credit Governor A. G. Black.

Quigley cut loose with a blast against Wickard.

"Rank-and-file Democrats in the farm belt," he said, "are damning Secretary Wickard and his whole crew and they want him to go back to feeding hogs in Indiana." He added that the department has "sold out completely to the Farmers' Union."

Lend-Lease Aid To Russia Hit Top in November

Lend-lease shipments to Russia during November were the highest for any month during the war and had a purchase value of 338 million dollars, the Foreign Economic Administration announced yesterday.

This figure covered military and industrial supplies as well as food, FEA said.

Pay Pact Approved, Railroads Are Returned to Owners

under the original sliding scale, with the remainder in lieu of overtime.

The Nation's 350,000 operating workers who receive 83 cents an hour or more have settled their dispute for a flat 9-cents-an-hour increase, including 4 cents an hour under the Little Steel formula and 5 cents in lieu of overtime and expenses away from home, plus a week's vacation with pay. The nonoperating workers were not entitled to any adjustment under the Little Steel formula, but the sliding scale was awarded to correct substandard living conditions, carrying part of the adjustment over to maintain interrelated job differentials.

The 10-to4-cent part of the adjustment was awarded retroactive to February 1, 1943, but the 1-to-5-cent remainder in lieu of overtime was made affective as of December 27, the date President Roosevelt seized the railroads. Retroactive wage payments ranging from $100 for the higher-paid workers to $250 for lower-paid workers will be made under the agreement.

The original nonoperating wage demand—for a 20-cent-an-hour wage increase—was filed in September 1942. The workers had received a previous boost of 10 cents an hour in 1941.

President Roosevelt was notified of the pact by J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, who said:

"Should this agreement with the nonoperating organizations receive governmental approvel, it will dispose of the entire wage controversy between the carriers represented by the Eastern, Western, and Souteastern Carriers' Conference Committees and their operating and nonoperating organizations."

In his letter to Stimson, the President asked him to make the adjustments effective as of December 27, and added:

"As this settlement brings to an end the wage controversy between the carriers and their employes, I hope as soon as you have satisfied yourself that the provisions of the executive order have been complied with, that you will promptly return the railroads to the owners."

The unions also signed a separate pact with the Railway Express Agency, supplementing the 10-to-4-cent sliding scale with a 1-to-2½-cent overtime award—a total of 11 to 6½. The slightly lower amount was provided because express agency employes are employed on a 44-hour week, instead of the 48-hour week which the other nonoperating employes work.

Stimson's statement said:

"I have been informed by the President that all unresolved questions have been agreed upon by the carriers and the railroad labor organizations and that the agreements have been approved by the wage stabilization director.

"These agreements provide assurance that there will be no stoppage of rail service and that the employes of the railroads will continue to discharge their responsibilities faithfully and conscienciuosly so that there may be no diminution in the rising tide of our military might.

"I have therefore ordered that War Department possession and operation of the railroads cease at midnight tonight, January 18, 1944.

"In returning the railroads, it is my desire to thank the men and women of American railroad management and labor for remaining at their posts throughout the period of Government control and thus preventing a break in the orderly movement of troops and supplies to the fighting fronts."

POPULAR THEN A Gem Now!

"IN THE EVENING BY THE MOONLIGHT"

A BALLAD as truly Washington's own as are Senate Beer and Senate Ale. James Bland, famous composer of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," lived here when he wrote his harmonizer's favorite, "In the Evening by the Moonlight."

An appealing blend of words and music popularized the song and the subtle blending of choicest malt, hops and grain achieve a flavor-melody in Senate which has made it, too, an enduring favorite.

Senate BEER & Ale

The elements that have locked the song in the hearts of three generations are too subtle to be analyzed. Not so the element that locks in the flavor of Senate Beer and Ale. Small bubble carbonation does that with added zest for the critical taste.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

In the same week when Fritzie Zivic says he is hanging 'em up for good, Henry Armstrong embarks on his third come-back tour, recalling that Zivic outsmarted Armstrong once before. That was the night he lifted the world welterweight title from Hammering Henry.

POVICH

Zivic, who is going into the Army, says he was going to quit the fight business anyway, "because those guys are beginning to hurt me." He is not ashamed to admit it. Armstrong gets hurt, too, by guys he could chill in a couple of rounds when he was younger and sprier, but the lure of the lucre overpowers his pain.

For his pounds and inches, Armstrong was one of the great fighters of all time and when he runs out of hand-picked opponents on this come-back tour there's going to be something sad about seeing him licked. In his own native California, the State Boxing Commission won't license him to fight because of the condition of his eyes, but in States where the commissions are not so particular he can work.

Armstrong has taken a match in Washington for February 21 against an as yet unnamed opponent, and he'll probably pack Uline's Arena as he did last year when he fought to a $17,288 gate, topped only by the Louis-Baer fight here. He's still a drawing card, even when he doesn't know, like Zivic, when to quit.

Zivic has discovered in the last year that all the tricks of which he is master can't offset his lost youth, the dulling of his speed and the stamina that enabled him to outrough even as great a fighter as Armstrong. When he lost his third decision in as many starts against Jake La Motta in Detroit the other night, Fritzie decided he'd had enough.

Zivic always looked like the popular conception of what a pug should look like, with a bashed-in nose that is the badge of his profession, but he was always sensitive about it nevertheless. "This dent in my nose makes me look like a dope who couldn't box," he said, "but I didn't get this in the ring." Nobody ever hit him that hard with a fist, Zivic always hastened to explain. "I got it when we were kids and I was hit with a baseball bat."

The Zivic story we like best is the one he tells about a Madison Square Garden fight when he was having a tough time of it against a fellow he was supposed to lick. It was the late rounds and the decision was in doubt when, toward the end of a round, Zivic's opponent turned his head to look at the big clock on the balcony. Whereupon Zivic knocked him out.

"I had twenty fights in the Garden before that fight," said Zivic "and all my life I was waiting for some guy in there with me to be dumb enough to turn his head toward that clock. I promised myself the first guy who tried it would never get away with it."

All of a sudden the fistic interest is flaming in Washington and all because there are five lightweights and featherweights on the local scene who can pack 'em in. The Aaron Perry-Vic Creelman fight at Uline's on Friday night will be the beginning of a roundelay that has the customers whipped up.

In the background, awaiting a shot at the Creelman-Perry winner are Lew Hanbury, Billy Banks and Frankie Wills, all of whom are favorites with the local clientele, and the promoters will be in clover for months. Out of the ready-made tournament will come the boys who will get the shots at Henry Armstrong and Willie Angott next month, providing whopping incentive.

Perry will go into the ring on Friday against Creelman as a substitute for Billy Banks and in this case the substitute fight stacks up as a better attraction than the original. The Banks-Creelman bout was to be a rematch, but fighting on the same card as that pair in their last bout was young Perry, a stand-up colored lad who may be the best puncher of the lot. He hasn't fought better than a semifinal thus far, but he may go into the ring the favorite to beat Creelman who won 31 fights before he dropped a decision to Banks.

Ten Years at $12,500

Rowland, Coast League's New Boss, Acclaimed by Wrigley

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Clarence Rowland, newly elected president of the Pacific Coast League, today was rated as "the best-posted man in baseball."

The appraisal was made by Phil K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, and also owner of the Los Angeles club, which Rowland had directed as president for three years before his elevation yesterday to the $12,500-a-year job as chief executive of the coast circuit for ten years.

Wrigley predicted Rowland would be an outstanding success.

"It's little surprising to me that Rowland had to go away to be fully appreciated," Wrigley said. "It's like the saying: 'A prophet has no honor in his own country.'

"He did an excellent job, a great job, at Los Angeles and during the ten years he was connected with the Cub organization.

"Now, he's getting what he's entitled to. He'll be a success. We will miss him a hell of a lot."

Managed 1917 White Sox

The record indicates that Rowland, connected with baseball for 40-odd years, should have everything his new position requires. He has served at every type of task in the game—player, manager, owner, president, scout and umpire.

Much of his career was spent in Chicago, where he saw service with both the Cubs and White Sox. He managed the White Sox to their last world's championship, when they conquered the New York Giants in 1917.

Rowland's career started at the turn of the century when he quit his job as a hotel bellhop in his native Dubuque, Iowa, to become a phenomenal kid catcher. While in his early 20's he became owner of the Dubuque Club, then in the Three-I League, in 1903. He was snatched from the Dubuque "bushes" by the late Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, in 1915 to become manager of the team without any previous major league experience, and served four years through 1918.

Moved to Cubs in '33

From 1923 to 1927, Rowland took a fing at umpiring in the American League, and was known to the fraternity as "Ban Johnson's friend." After the death of Johnson, founder and president of the league, Rowland became a member of the Cubs' baseball cabinet in 1933. He served as president of the Reading, Pa., club which the Cubs operated as a farm, and as scout and reconnaissance man until he became president of the Los Angeles Angels in 1941.

O'Donnell Bids $5000 for Share In Aaron Perry

An amazing $5000 offer was made yesterday for a half interest in Aaron Perry, virtually untried colored lightweight, by Tom O'Donnell, Washington restaurantuer. The offer was made to Harry Garsh, manager of the youngster who fights Victor Creelman Friday here.

"I thought O'Donnell was kidding all the time," said Garsh last night. "He said something about $5000 and a half interest in Perry last week at Ulines but I laughed it off. I was surprised when he came to me yesterday and said it was on the level. O'Donnell has give me until noon Friday to make up my mind and the decision I make might surprise a lot of people."

O'Donnell, who guided some parts of the career of Marty Gallagher local heavyweight, said last night, "Perry looks mighty good to me. If he gets by Creelman, he will go places I believe and I have confidence that he will."

Creelman Arrives To Finish Training

Victor Creelman, sensational New York lightweight, yesterday reported here to conclude training for his scheduled nine-round boxing feature with fast rising Aaron Perry at Uline Arena Friday night.

Creelman shifted his training activities to Stillman's gymnasium, New York, last week, and has been working out under the direction of Ray Arcel, nationally famous trainer, who will handle Victor Friday night.

Creelman is to drill at the Merrick Boys Club Gymnasium today and will conclude preliminary work with a final public workout at the Liberty Athletic Club's gym tomorrow.

Creelman, on the strength of 31 victories in his last 32 starts, is being quoted a 6-to-5 favorite over Perry.

Curtis Bay Six Defeats Falcons, 5-3

By Walter Haight

Rough-and-ready ice hockey, topping anything seen in these parts, prevailed as the Curtis Bay Coast Guard Cutters banged their way to a 5-3 victory over the Philadelphia Falcons last night at Uline Arena. The Cutters, veterans of many an ice battle, had to call on all their tricks to dispose of the "kid" team featuring five boys of 17 years. The youngsters came on the ice with a chip on every shoulder and they fought every inch of the way before an appreciative crowd of 4000.

Forced to wear the jerseys of the late Washington Eagles because their colors conflicted with those of the Guardsmen, the Falcons played like little demons but had to bow to a superior hockey team.

Cutters Fair Fighters

The Cutters divided honors with their rivals in a fight that marked a lively second period, but they were never headed in the scoring column. They made the only count of the first session and then clung to a one or two point lead thereafter.

Johnny Mariucci, former Black Hawk hockeyist and Minnesota football and ice star, again performed nobly for the Cutters, along with Ed Barry and Alex Motter. The Falcons' 17-year-old goalie, Red Henry, and Defenseman Doug Maher were standouts for the visitors.

The first period was the roughest opening session seen here this season, with three players—Olson and Coulter of the Cutters and Baby of the Falcons—being sent to the penalty box. The Coast Guardsmen kept Goalie Red Henry busy but it was not until 11:30 that the only score of the period materialized.

At this point, Johnny Mariucci took a short pass from Dunsmore in front of the Falcon goal and whipped it in. The Falcons came back fighting, worked the puck into position but were unable to get an open shot, Goalie Brimsek slicing off their bids.

Wild and Wooly Session

Everything that goes with making ice hockey a major winter sport was crammed into the second period, the heat of the battle finally reaching dangerous proportions with players of both teams figuring in a free-for-all. Cotlow and Gasperini started the tangle and the others joined in with sticks flying. Cotlow and Gasparini drew 5-minute penalties.

The Cutters took a 2-0 lead at 6:00 when Ed Lunberg scored with the aid of Asmundson and Barry. The Falcons finally got into the scoring column 30 seconds later on a penalty shot. Mariucci hooked the Falcons' Ted Garwin and on the free try, Garwin slammed it in. After the aforementioned fight, Barry banged one home at 11:05, but the Falcons matched it on a brilliant count by Gasparini, who took a lightning pass from Drummond at 17:35. The period ended with the Cutters in front, 3-2.

Cutters Pull Away

The Cutters were not long in lengthening their lead in the third period. Dunsmore counted at 2:18 on a pass from Motter and the same player was credited with an assist on another goal by Cook at 4:46. With the Cutters' Barry in the penalty box for elbowing, the Falcons counted when Stewart, stretched out on the ice, nudged the puck to Langlois for the score at 10:21. The remainder of the period failed to produce a score because of the alertness of the Falcons' Goalie Henry.

Anacostia's Five Beaten By 33 to 19

By Tom Moore McBride

The Eastern High basketballers found their home court to their liking yesterday and defeated Tech, 38-29, to gain a second-place tie with the Manual Trainers, while Western spurted ahead of Anacostia in the second half to end their game, 33-19.

By virtue of Tech's licking, Coolidge moved into undisputed first place in the interhigh series.

Behind the 13-point scoring of Bob Lamon and the 11 points of Ed Charnock, the Eastern Ramblers pulled ahead of Tech early in the second quarter and led, 24-16, at the half. Eastern's Mike Pappafotis dominated the floor play during the third quarter to keep the ball pretty much in the vicinity of the Tech basket, though his teammates were missing consistently, and somehow the Trainers pulled up to 31-26 by the end of the period.

Battle of Trumpets

There were desperation thrusts in the final frame by Tech, but Eastern kept them pretty well smothered.

Though far outnumbered by Eastern rooters, the Tech fans were far ahead in the cheering section rivalry, aided immeasurably by two trumpets which boogie-woogied through the time-outs and half-time periods. Eastern had a trumpet, too, but it lacked the virtuosity and shrillness of the Trainers' horn.

Western met a surprise in a considerably strengthened Anacostia team and succeeded in leading by a mere point, 5-4, at the end of the first quarter. The boys from across the creek were even more surprised when the half ended to find themselves still leading by only a point. The Raiders had been missing chances after reaching scoring territory.

Love and Bell Score

Ray Love and Brian Bell remedied things somewhat for the Raiders in the third quarter, but their efforts were matched by Milt Gendason of Anacostia, who was putting them through the hoop with annoying regularity. Still, Western led, 23-19, as the period ended.

Love, Bell and Bob Hart got together on the matter in the final quarter, however, and accounted for all of the scoring. Even Gendason was rendered impotent by the remarkably stiffened Western defense, and it ended 33-19.

Johns Hopkins Routed, 62-39, By Catholic U.

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Johns Hopkins University basketball team absorbed a 62-to-39 beating at the hands of a sparkling Catholic University Quintet tonight in a Mason-Dixon Conference test.

The Hopkins boys played their best game so far this season but were no match for the experienced crew from Washington which has lost only one game this season.

For the first 10 minutes the Blue Jays made it a real battle, the score at that point reading 8-7 in favor of the visitors, but from that point on the Catholic cagemen forged ahead slowly but surely.

The half time score was 24 to 14.

The visitors really began to click with the opening of the second stanza and quickly turned the contest into a rout.

Terps Scrap Varsity Sport Of Lacrosse

The University of Maryland, after taking an inventory of material on hand for the possibilities of a spring schedule, has decided to make no attempt to carry on any varsity sports this spring.

Dr. Clarence W. Spears, in making the announcement yesterday, said the major sport of lacrosse will not be abandoned altogether, as programs will be planned for intramural stick games.

Lacrosse Coach Al Heagy said that "every effort will be made to keep the sport alive on the Maryland campus through the intramural system."

The decision followed a meeting with the locrosse prospects for the coming year. It was found that there were not enough planning to come out to make a scheduled collegiate season worth while.

Maryland probably will feel most the loss of their big spring sport of lacrosse. The Old Liners have been one of the outstanding stick teams on the country for the past 32 years, dating back to the sport's beginning at College Park in 1910.

Maryland turned out national collegiate lacrosse champion teams in 1936, 1939, 1940, and were co-holders with Princeton in 1937. The Liners were also runners-up in 1938 and were given honorable mention last year on the basis of their seven and one record.

Under the directing hand of Al Heagy, the lacrossemen placed five men on the All-South team last year, and Jack Dittmar, close defense, and Jack Hoyert, midfield, were placed on the first All-American team.

Evans Will Meet LaChappelle In Rassle Feature

Maurice LaChappelle, who styles himself the Flying Frenchman and who is everything his name implies, will get his second crack at Don Evans, Pacific Coast grappler, in tonight's feature tussle at Turner's Arena.

LaChappelle will engage the blond Californian in a one-fall-to-a-finish match that has stirred up so much interest that Promoter Joe Turner is anticipating his largest turnout in months.

Evans beat LaChappelle last week in 22 minutes after the Frenchman made a bold attack on Referee Tiny Bouque by twice dropkicking him to the canvas and later belaboring him with stinging uppercuts.

Jack Wentworth and Dr. John Bonika will meet Dick Bishop and Mike DeMetra in a special two-man match. Michele Leone and Johnny Long will clash in a semiwindup, while Tom Mahoney and Ed (Strangler) White will open hostilities at 8:45 o'clock.

With George Hughes turning in a brilliant effort, St. John's turned in its second victory of the season, defeating Central High, 39-29, on the home floor. Central, in the early stages, appeared on the way to making a runaway of the game. The Vikings ran up an 18-11 lead in the first half.

In the third period, the Johnnies held Central and went on to take a 27-21 advantage. In the final session, Central was held safe.

Hughes, held to 3 points in the first half, scored 13 in the second. He sank 7 field goals and 2 fouls. Dudley, for the Johnnies, accounted for 9 points. Panturis and Sussman led the Central attack.

Retirement Fund Come-On Has Smell Like Racket

Here's something the Ramspeck Committee MUST investigate. It has all the earmarks of a scandal and it's the duty of the Ramspeck Committee to tear off the lid to determine if there's any wrong-doing and personal profit involved. It has to do with the Federal Employe's Civil Service retirement fund. Many empolyes who resign leave their money in the retirement fund. These people expect to return to the Federal service some day and, after all, the money is perfectly safe. Furthermore, the former employes can get the money any time they wish though it'll take several months. A minor number of employes have forgotten to close their accounts and in this event the money eventually will be turned into the general Treasury fund.

Several years ago, the Civil Service Commission ordered a list made up of all former employes who had money in the retirement fund and the amounts of each. The cost of making such a list was substantial as none had been made before. On the list, it's reported, were the names of more than 40,000 former employes who had more than a million dollars in the fund. In recent months a Washington law firm has been sending letters to former employes whose names were on the list to suggest that it would be mighty pleased to get their money out of the retirement fund for a 20 per cent cut. How many people fell for this isn't known but it wouldn't take many to make some easy money. The former employes could have gotten the full amounts merely by writing the commission. The lawyer's fee was unnecessary.

However, a complaint was filed with the District of Columbia Bar Association and, it's reported, the law firm in question has been called before the association's committee on ethics. That's a splendid first step. But many more questions are unanswered and the Ramspeck Committee should investigate until it gets them. These, for example: (1) Why was the list made up? (2) gave the lawyer his information? (3) who were given lists and why?

To the employes, the Civil Service retirement fund is something almost sacred and nothing should ever be done to question its integrity or to give it even the appearance of being a racket in any form. The answers to the above questions can be had easily though they'll make some faces a vivid red. Mr. Ramspeck, the employes are depending on you.

Girls who live in Kansas Hall at Arlington Farms are circulating a petition to protest against a decision to give the WAVES two more residence halls. They make the excellent points that they do just as valuable war work as the WAVES and that Arlington Farms was built for civilian Government girls and that it was never intended for the WAVES. The girls say flatly that they'll pack up and go back home if they're asked to move to make room for the WAVES. The girls in the other halls also are stirred up over the WAVE invasion. Navy already has 30000 WAVES at the farm and it wants quarters for 2000 others. After a round of conferences, both National Housing and Civil Service are agreed that no civilian will be ejected to make way for the WAVES, and further, that all reservations for civilians must be honored.

Lou Needler has resigned from Agriculture to join an Indiana farm implement firm. He a former State purchasing agent for Indiana . . . Glynn A. Britton of War's Transportation Office, has been awarded $250, the top amount, for his suggestion that'll save Uncle Sam more than $500,000 annually in freight rates . . . T. L. Ayers has been appointed assistant chief of Triple A's Southern division . . . Just last week H. J. Jenkins, food inspector of the D. C. Health Department, made a routine check of the Commerce Department cafeteria and he reported in part: "The Commerce cafeteria was in wonderful sanitary condition. I could find nothing of which to complain." The Buzzard, employe publication, has suggested a boycott because of poor service and insanitary conditions . . .

GOVERNMENT GIRLS: Would you like to make one dress loom like a wardrobe? How to spend less money and look better? You'll get these answers at the Wartime Educational Clinic to be held in the New Interior auditorium Monday and Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock. The shows are sponsored by the GOVERNMENT GIRL CLUB and they'll be presented by The Post. They're designed to answer the colthes problems of the average Government girl. Grooming, beauty, skin care, and fashions will be discussed by experts. Fifty-five Government girls will model.

Admission is free but by ticket only. Tickets are being prorated according to the number of Government girls in each agency. The GOVERNMENT GIRL CLUB is sending tickets to each personnel office, and either the personnel counselor or recreation director will handle them. The demand is great, so get your ticket early. 35,000 Seek Bond Buyers In District

An army of 35,000 "Bondadiers" yesterday began to comb every office and house in Washington in an effort to stimulate War Bond sales as the campaign to raise 95 million dollars locally was officially opened.

Early in the day the first bond in the national Fourth War Loan Drive was sold to Vice President Henry Wallace by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, who journeyed to Capitol Hill for the ceremony.

In accepting the bond, Mr. Wallace told the Secretary of the Treasury that the "Congressmen of the United States are convinced that the buying of war bonds is secondary only to the fighting of our men at the front."

An informal outdoor rally at the U. S. Information Center, 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., officially opened the District drive at noon yesterday. The program featured the auctioning of captured military equipment to bond purchasers, and addresses by John A. Reilly, chairman of the D. C. War Finance Committee, and Comdr. J. H. Masse, captain of the Liberty ship Mariner, now on view at the Municipal Pier.

'Maid of Cotton' to Sell War Bonds in Capital

The 1944 "Maid of Cotton," Miss Linwood Gisclard of Donaldsonville, La., will arrive at 12:30 today to begin two days of bond selling.

Miss Gisclard, who gained her title in competition with 75 Southern beauties in a recent contest at Memphis, Tenn., will be met at Union Station by Congressmen from the cotton States, Treasury officials and the District Commissioners. Following luncheon at the House of Representatives, she will visit Walter Reed Hospital, the Stage Door Canteen and the Earle Theater.

First to visit the ship yesterday were 5000 employes of the Agriculture Department, who were led by their chief, Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard. They were welcomed by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, War Shipping Administrator. Admission of the general public to the ship was in the afternoon.

Federal employes will visit the Mariner in departmental groups between 10 a. m. and 12 noon during the drive while public exhibition hours have been set from 2:30 to 5 and from 7:30 to 10 p. m. daily.

Bomber Christened

Also highlighting yesterday's activitic was the christening of a Hellcat Bomber at the National Airport. The first of a fleet of carrier-based planes purchased by citizens of Washington during a special bond campaign last fall, the Hellcat was christened by Mrs. Cassin H. Young, mother of the late Capt. Cassin Young of Washingt n, who was killed while commanding the USS San Francisco at Guadalcanal in November, 1942. As a part of the ceremonies, the official District seal was placed on the plane.

A series of official war photographs went on display yesterday at the Raleigh Haberdasher, 1310 F st. nw., in conjunction with the opening of the drive. Demonstrating war bonds in action, the photos trace the progress of the war from Pearl Harbor to Tarawa.

Students Invest $15,000

Sales resulting from one rally held yesterday indicated that the goal would be met. Students of Calvin Coolidge High School purchased more than $15,000 worth of bonds and stamps following a pep assembly held at the school.

Meanwhile, the civilian employes at Fort Washington announced that their post was the first in the military District of Washington to go over the top in a campaign to gain 100 per cent participation in a 10 per cent payroll deduction plan. Treasury achievement flags will be presented to the employes by Maj. Gen. H. K. Loughry, Army budget officer, at 11 a. m. today.

Other activities scheduled today include a rally by the Rotary Club at the Willard at 12:30, a meeting of the Guest House Division of the District Committee at the Statler at 8:30 p. m., and a meeting of Washington Gas Light Co. employes at 3:30 p. m. with Judge Edward M. Curran as speaker.

Chief Justice, Gen. Vandegrift Praise Miss Boardman

A life "dedicated to a single aim—the development of the Red Cross," yesterday received the tribute of Chief Justice of the United States Harlan Fiske Stone, Lieut. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, commandant of the Marine Corps and Red Cross heads at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel in honor of Miss Mabel T. Boardman, American Red Cross secretary.

A thousand persons crowded into two large dining rooms to hear the Supreme Court Chief Justice describe the prgoress fo the Red Cross since Miss Boardman first becmae associated with it in 1900, to its present status of "the greatest and most efficient weapon against human misfortune which the world has known."

General Vandegrift, fighting commander of Marine forces at Guadalcanal, declared: "I have been constantly amazed by the variety, the scope and the efficiency of Red Cross activities. Wherever I have gone, I have seen and heard eloquent tribute to the achievements of this association, which are in turn tributes to the prfoound vision, faith and industry with which Miss Boardman has done so much to make success possible.

He recalled motion pictures of the battle of Tarawa which, he said, probably would be available for public exhibitions soon and "will convince you that the work you have done and the donations you have made in money and to the Red Cross blood plasma bank are repaid many time in lives of American boys."

"The Allied offensive in the Pacific has taken and will take more than a single line of progress," General Vandegrift said. "The enemy is still powerful, still confident. His forward movement has been stopped but his defenses have barely been tapped. To breech those defenses the Allies need to converge from all directions . . . as many of those islands as we need, we shall have to take by force. We shall strive to do so with the least possible expenditure of lives, blood and time. But the cost may not al- be light.

"All this means the need for Red Cross services in the Pacific islands warfare alone is going to be sharply accelerated . . . multiplied by the needs throughout the world, wherever men are at war. The drains on the Red Cross' energy and facilities will be tremendous."

Miss Boardman, in response to these tributes, summarzide the work of the society since World War II commenced—one billion articles made by volunteers, of which 900 million were surgical dressings; 43,000 Army and Navy nurses recruited, 125 million families given aid through Red Cross home service, 5,750,000 units of blood plasma provided, and a million prisoners of war packages sent overseas every month.

Witness Testifies Steinberg Admitted Embezzling $9300

Evidence was presented yesterday in the District Court trial of Albert M. Steinberg, charged with embezzling $9300, that he admitted the theft to one attorney and paid $10,000 out of a stocking to a bonding company so that it would not suffer loss.

William E. Cumberland, attorney for the bonding firm of Young & Simon, said that one day last year Steinberg came into his office and took out of his stocking nine $1000 bills and ten $100 bills. Cumberland said the money was accepted and locked up in a safe deposit box.

Asked why the $10,000 was not used by the bonding company, Cumberland said his firm was keeping it "for whomever it belonged to, Forman—or maybe Steinberg."

Alexander Forman is president of Forman, Inc., liquor wholesaling firm where Steinberg was employed as a bookkeeper.

Cumberland emphasized that his contact with Steinberg was to adjust a civil liability. He stated the innocence or guilt of Steinberg was never discussed. He said the bonding company paid in full the Forman company claims on shortages.

Lieut. Comdr. John R. Fitzpatrick, former assistant U. S. attorney and dean of Columbus Law School, testified that Steinberg admitted to him in Peacock Alley of the Willard that he had embezzled money from the Forman company.

He said Steinberg had asked for help and that he had advised him the only aid he could give him was to get a "good criminal lawyer."

The case is being prosecuted by Assistant U. S. Attorneys Bernard Margolius and John L. Ingoldsby before Justice Matthew F. McGuire.

Defense Attorney Austin F. Canfield began his cross-examination concerning Commander Fitpatrick's activities as attorney for the Forman firm just before court adjourned.

Kelly Once Seized Quantico Union Funds, Fihelly Claims

Former Labor Leader Larry Kelly, now a fugitive from the District Grand J y, was described yesterday by Assistant U. S. Attorney John W. Fihelly as a 'man who was attracted to money like a magnet and who went wherever the gold was."

Fihelly, in recalling new evidence, said that Kelly, one-time boss of Building Laborers Union Local No. 74 in Washington, during his activities "moved into" the union local at Quantico, Va., and took over its treasury, although he had no right to do so. Fihelly said that for two years the only treasury the Quantico union had was in Kelly's personal bank account.

The District grand jury is now investigating Kelly and others in the union in connection with an alleged embezzlement of what was said to be more than $150,000 in union funds. Kelly is also being sued by rank-and-file members of his union and by his superior officers in the international union.

The grand jury investigation is expected to last another month. At the present time an audit of the union finances, which is necessary to complete the case, is still in a preliminary stage.

Kelly had no right to enter the Quantico local, Fihelly said, because the labor leader was a member of the Washington local and an executive of the District Council which controls 11 local unions of this area. Kelly also became involved in the affairs of local unions at Cedar Point and Camp Spring, Md., Fihelly said.

'Home Rule' Plan of 1940 Advocated

By James E. Chinn

A streamlined District government patterned after the almost forgotten Griffenhagen plan of 1940 was advocated last night by Representative McGehee (Democrat) of Mississippi, as a substitute for the various reorganization proposals now before Congress.

He said he would introduce soon a bill containing the features of the Griffenhagen setup and ask for its early consideration by the House District Committee of which he is a member.

The reorganization plans embodied in both the McCarran and Hebert bills, McGehee declared, are not broad enough in scope to increase the efficiency of the municipal government and give the Commissioners a broad grant of administrative power.

The Griffenhagen plan was originally sponsored by former Representative Kennedy (Democrat) of Maryland and through his efforts a modified version of it got as far as the House calendar. McGehee was a member of a special subcommittee headed by Kennedy which conducted extensive public hearings on the reorganization bill.

Revisions Completed

Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee yesterday completed revisions suggested for his so-called "home rule" bill and planned to place them before a subcommittee for review later this week.

The proposed changes, based on recommendations made to the subcommittee during extensive hearings on the measure last month, were not revealed. McCarran said he would make them public after the subcommittee subjects them to examination.

One of the changes suggested during the hearings would add at least two members to the city council of seven that would be elected. The two additional members would be appointed by the President to represent the Federal interests in the District.

If the subcommittee approves any of the recommended changes, the original bill will be revised and placed before the full committee for consideration.

Hearings Begin April 24

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee yesterday set April 24 as the date for beginning hearings on the District's 66 million dollar budget for the new fiscal year beginning June 30.

According to his program, the hearings will be completed May 13, and the committee will have the appropriation bill ready to report to the House the week of May 22.

The hearings will be conducted by a subcommittee headed by Representative Coffee (Democrat) of Washington. The subcommittee also will write the appropriation bill, using the buget estimate as a guide.

Cannon explained that the late date for starting the hearings is not unusual, since it has long been customary for the Appropriations Committee to defer consideration of the District bill until other regular appropriation bills have been reported to the House.

Prior to the hearings, the Coffee subcommittee plans to make a thorough study of the budget which was sent to Congress last week with an explanatory statement pointing out that despite its record-breaking size municipal revenues would be able to support it without increasing taxes, and at the same time clear the municipal government of debt for the first time in 13 years. The outstanding item in the budget sets up a three million-dollar reserve to finance a public works program as soon as wartime priorities are relaxed.

Secret Hearing Of WAC Officer Begun by Army

Two WAC captains, five Army officers, WAC Lieut. Virginia Wight, and her attorney, James J. Laughlin, marched into a large room yesterday afternoon at the Pentagon Building as an Army reclassification board probed charges that the red-haired lieutenant wore sweater and slacks, was insubordinate, unsocial to her fellow-officers, went out late at night, and fraternized with enlisted personnel.

The hearing will continue, in secret, this morning at 9:30.

The Army men seen going into the room were a colonel, two lieutenant colonels and a major. Lieutenant Wight's father, Lawrence, a teacher at Penn Charter School in Philadelphia, was denied entrance, but the indications were that he might be called as a character witness.

It was learned last night that certain of the statements on which the charges were based have been modified considerably.

City News In Brief

Five Seized in Raid Charged With Lottery Law Violations

Four men and a woman were charged with violating the lottery laws last night following a raid on a home at 2826 Evarts st. ne., described by police as "headquarters of a large scale numbers ring."

Hundreds of alleged policy slips, seven adding machine and $200 were confiscated by the raiders, led by Capt. Walter Storm, Twelfth Precinct. Other in the party were Detectives Daniel Slattery, Ernest P. Jefferson and James Fox.

Charged with conspiracy to evade the lottery law, and operating a lottery and possesion of lottery slips, the suspects identified themselves as George P. Double Pay Denied

An attempt by employes of the Customs Service of the Treasury Department to obtain double pay for holiday work was dismissed yesterday by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough of District Court.

The plaintiffs, John D. Benedetto of New York and Wayland O. Dorrance of Jersey City, sought to have the court require Secretary Morgenthau to order double-time pay for work done on New Year's, Memorial Day, and Thanksgiving in 1942 and asked a court ruling on other holidays as well.

The Government, through United States Attorney Edward M. Curran, and his assistant, Daniel B. Maher, argued District Court had no jurisdiction to decide the claim. The suit, it was said, should have been taken to the United States Court of Claims.

Meanwhile, other burn victims remained in critical condition at other hospitals. They are Arthur Lunsford, 6, at Gallinger; Ruth McDonald, 8, at Providence Hospital and Mrs. Agnes Hoppe, 73, at Georgetown Hospital.

Walks Back a Free Man

It happened in Municipal Court yesterday that a 70-year-old man was charged with assaulting his 30-year-old son-in-law who looked very spry indeed.

The son-in-law testified he had gone to take his wife from the aged man's home, where she had gone after a family argument. The son-in-law testified he said to the old man, "Hi ya, pops, I'm taking my wife home. H'ya doing?"

The old man, he said, was in the backyard pounding at a kettle in which there was ice, and he is supposed to have replied, "I'll show you how I'm doing."

The son-in-law said the old man then started chasing him, and that it went on for ten blocks when the old man was supposed to have fired one bullet which missed.

With this the prosecution missed, too. Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn took one look at the aged defendant and dismissed the case.

Fined for Short Weight

OPA Charges Violations

The District Office of Price Administration asked District Court yesterday to prevent J. F. Meenehan's Sons Co., hardware dealers at 2010 14th st. nw. and 3241 M st. nw. from operating their business until alleged violations of price ceiling regulations cease.

Rush Hour Bus Crash Injures 14

A rush-hour collision between two fully loaded Capital Transit Co. buses at 2d and F sts. ne. at 5:27 p. m. yesterday injured 14 persons and shook up scores of others who refused hospital treatment.

The crash occurred, according to the drivers when both swerved left to avoid striking a fast-moving sedan traveling south on 2d st. as the two buses entered the intersection.

Both buses carried capacity loads estimated to number about 120 persons and were traveling on F st.

One bus, eastbound, was heading for the Trinidad junction and was operated by Lawrence L. Irvin, 43 of 1 Anacostia rd. ne. The other, bound for Glover Park, was moving west driven by Herman J. Lazar, 43 of 3335 Dix st. ne.

One Driver Injured

Irvin escaped injury while Lazar received possible fractured left ankle. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital.

Other injured were rushed to Casualty in police scout cars, an ambulance from the Fire Department and the hospital. They were identified as:

Mrs. Marion L. Stanner, 56, of Capital Heights, Md., fractured right rib.

Rose R. Eicher, 67, of 1460 Irving st. nw., bruised chest and neck.

Beulah L. Powell, 27, of 1730 Massachusetts ave. se., cut shins.

Florence E. Verbosh, 27, 807 H st. ne., bruised shoulder.

Vivian Walker, Negro, 32, 620 3rd st. ne., broken right wrist.

Arlene Stanback, Negro, 18, 208 F st. ne., bruised forehead.

Mrs. Martha E. Grist, 35, of 1432 Trinidad ave. ne., possible internal injuries.

Eleanor White, 48, of 356 K st. sw., knee injuries.

Mrs. Rose Saulsbury of 1318 Queen st. ne., broken nose and possible concussion.

Virgie Sutton, Negro, 31, of 425 Q st. nw., bruised shoulder and back.

William Henry, Negro, 54, of 232 E st. sw., laceration over the right eye.

Fenwick Osborne, Negro, 544, of 84 I st. sw., bruised right hand.

Earlier in the day the death of Thomas Harry Williams, 8, under the wheels of a Capital Transit Co. bus while sledding Monday, was declared accidental by a coroner's jury.

The verdict exonerated John A. Boyd, 37, of 1012 Pennsylvania ave. se., driver of the bus.

Witnesses testified the boy, with his brother, Joe R. Williams, jr., 3, was coasting down the hill and was unable to stop when the bus approached. Joe, it was said, toppled off the sled just before the crash.

Fatality Probe Ordered

An investigation of streetcar and bus accidents causing an increasing number of fatalities here was ordered yesterday by the PUC, and at the same time, Chairman James H. Flanagan and Minority Member Gregory Hankin issued statements as regards "nothing" being done since August, 1942, to reduce deaths or injuries resulting from transit operations.

A hearing was set for February 1, when problems will be outlined as regards transit safety appliances, hiring and training of transit company personnel and to what extent injuries are the fault of the company. Assignments of problems will be made to commission members and further hearings held later.

E. D. Merrill, president of Capital Transit Co., said the company was glad to have an investigation which might in any way reduce accidents. He said, however: "We don't feel fatality comparisons are fair because chance that makes a fatality out of an accident" is something that cannot be controlled. He said that in terms of bus and streetcar miles, colisions with vehicles and pedestrians were decreasing. He said the company operated about 16 million car miles in 1939 and about 26 million in 1943—about 16 million bus miles in 1939 and about 25 million in 1943.

Police Inspector Arthur Miller and First Assistant Director M. O. Eldridge of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic are cooperating with the PUC in the investigation, Flanagan said. Eldridge and Inspector Clarence Talley, now head of the traffic bureau, attended yesterday's meeting. Inspector Talley will be relieved from the traffic position by Miller in about two weeks.

Bill of McCarran Continues Raise For D. C. Employes

Continuation for a year beyond April 30 of the temporary $300 a year wartime pay increase granted the District's 6000 police, firemen and public school teachers, is provided in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada.

The date of expiration of the raise was fixed April 30 this year when Congress last year optimistically believed the war would be over by that time and living expenses in Washington would drift back to a peacetime level.

Put Mind Over Muscle in Housework

(This is the third and final week in a series of articles by Ida Jean Kain for women who want to get in trim and stay that way. Today she tells you how to pick up and lift heavy articles without straining muscles. Her tips on posture will help you to conserve energy, too.)

By Ida Jean Kain

You don't have to have bulging biceps to do the hard jobs that call for lifting and shoving things around. But you do have to know how to use your muscles to avoid strain.

Some of the best instructions I have come across for heavy or light work are given in the WAC Physical Training Manual. If you are taking a man's place in a defense plant, these principles should be invaluable to you. Even if you are still doing housework, it's harder—the handy man has gone to war—and they can be quite a help.

When you have something heavy to pick up from the floor (maybe Junior!), make your leg muscles, rather than your back muscles, do most of the work. Stand sideways to the object with the far foot advanced, lower to floor, keeping your back straight, by bending your knees. Get as much of your body underneath as possible and lift by coming up to standing position.

If you have to carry a sack of potatoes or the laundry bag, first lift, then try to center its weight over your entire body. If possible, sling it over the shoulders with your back nearly straight.

You can use your body weight to make pushing and pulling easier. To push anything heavy, lean forward from the ankles with one foot advanced, and brace your feet against the floor. You can face the object and push with your arms, stand sideways and push with your shoulder, or turn your back on it and push with the upper back.

To pull anything that takes strength, brace your feet firmly with one foot forward and the other back, round your back, take a firm grip on the object, and let your body weight do most of the tugging.

Don't throw your energy away in light tasks by working with your muscles at a disadvantage, as you do when you stand with your knees stiff and stoop over to pick up a pin from the floor! Keep your back straight, bend your knees, and go down on your heels.

Halt March of Household Enemy Number One—The Clothes Moth

Martha Ellyn

The Sixth Column is on the march. So it's time to get into action and exterminate these rogues who make up this marauding organization. Homemakers know these pests, which ravage clothes, furs, blankets, feathers, rugs and other items as clothes moths. Even two dots and a splash of any sustenance on a fabric will provide, not only a choice hors d'oeuvre to the moth, but a whole meal. You listen patiently to others telling about the "terrible way" in which their clothes have been pilfered by these insects. But it is not until you have personally experienced their handiwork that you feel any acute pain.

Possessions Are Precious

When the tiny flit-wit, the moth miller, and his rear guardsman, the clothes moth, direct an attack on your precious belongings, it's a different story. And possessions are precious today. That's why the homemaker's watchword is CONSERVATION. Just try to replace a woolen suit, coat, furs, rugs or other possessions. What happens? You can't do so in many instances. And these things are higher priced than formerly.

If the quality and cost of clothing had been kept in line as well as has food, it might not be such a major catastrophe to find a moth-riddled garment. But since you can't duplicate many items even at a high cost, it is up to all to give that ounce of prevention and not have to worry about the cure.

There are three species of clothes moth: the webbing, the case-making and the tapestry. The adults, called moth millers, are tiny winged insects, varying from straw color to dark buff. They are usually seen flitting about the house from May to July, in September and October, and in steam-heated houses during January and February.

The recent sight of three of these household enemies flitting about my apartment impressed upon me the need of warning readers to be relentless in the treatment of these pests. Every single one seen flitting about should be killed or its eggs will find a nest.

Millers luxuriate in spots which are dark, warm and quiet. The eggs laid are usually hatched within four to eight days. As soon as the tiny white wormlike larvae emerge from the eggs they begin to feast. If they don't find a lunch counter near, they travel to one.

It is important to give time to the prevention of moth infestations. Once it gains a hold, the battle is a long, hard one. The natural enemies of the moth are sun and air. Frequent brushing, washing and dry cleaning of woolen garments, plus sunning and airing, will discourage attack.

The department, drug, and food stores offer good moth-destroying preparations. The spray method is effective. If used correctly, these sprays will kill moth larvae and eggs and make fabrics uneatable. The sprays penetrate fabrics and actually become part of the fiber, so it is important that the fabric be thoroughly sprayed. Many of these sprays are unharmful to clothes. Before spraying, brush garments thoroughly, giving special emphasis to the seams, pockets and cuffs. Be sure that folds and pleats are not overlooked.

A reliable moth-proofing rinse also offers a preventive for washable woolen articles. After the articles are washed and rinsed thoroughly, the moth-proofing compound is dissolved in clear water and the articles left to soak for a short time. This treatment will prevent moth damage until the garments are washed again since the fibers are not attractive to moth as food.

Various Preventives

Moth destroyers are sold in flakes, crystals of varying sizes, balls, cakes and in perforated containers. When moth crystals are used, articles to be stored should be laundered or dry cleaned if possible. Or they should be thoroughly brushed and hung in the sunlight for several hours. When moth crystals are used in chests, boxes or trunks, they may be placed in mesh bags or between layers of tissue paper and distributed through the container. When articles are to be stored away for a long time, renew the moth crystals as soon as the original supply has evaporated.

If there is a severe case of moths, fumigation is effective if done correctly. It is important to use a safe fumigant such as paradichlorobenzene or naphthalene crystals in sufficient quantities.

Be alert against this household enemy No. 1. If you let the larvae of the clothes moth eat your possessions you won't be patriotic. The estimated damage of two million dollars which moths do in households each year will buy an impressive number of war bonds.

Be on your guard against moths and use the savings to Back the Attack in the Fourth War Bond drive.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed at 19, on Eve of Enlisting, to Girl, 21, He Had Known Six Months, Boy Comes Back a Man From Combat Zone and Feels He's Outgrown Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wonder if you can help me with a problem that has me crazy. Just before enlisting, two years ago, I married a very attractive girl whom I had known only six months. At the risk of sounding like a cad, I am going to state that her interest in getting married was more insistent than mine. Not that I didn't want to marry her. I did. But since I was planning to enlist, I thought it better to wait. She didn't think so, and we were married. My family strongly advised against it, on the grounds of our youth. She was 21 and I was not quite 20. But Mary's family seemed rather anxious for us to get married. They offered no objection and made everything easy for us.

After nine months' training in various camps in the United States,—Mary was with me at two of them, for a total of three months, though I saw her only on weekends, as a rule,—I was shipped overseas. The next year was pretty bad. I'd like to forget most of it; but of course I can't. It's as much a part of me as the years that went before. I think I'm a completely different person than I was when I enlisted. I feel many more than two years older. And I've had to shoulder the increased responsibility that goes with promotion from corporal to commissioned rank. That sounds stuffy; but there is a difference in a man's feeling.

And now, to come to the point: I am aghast since my return to the U. S. to find that I no longer love Mary. I can't tell you why. She is still very pretty. She still seems to be terribly in love with me. But the whole thing leaves me cold. It isn't a new idea. I'd begun to recognize it before I came back. I would be disappointed if the mail didn't bring a letter from my mother or father; but I didn't care particularly when none came from Mary. However, I thought when I saw her again, I would feel differently. I don't. For two months, I've put up as good a bluff as I could. But I can't face bluffing through a lifetime of marriage.

Prefers Fighting Front To His Wife's Society

I'D LIKE to be sent back overseas at once; but the chances are I'll be kept in this country for five or six months more. And I can't face keeping up this bluff even for those few months. And I'm not getting away with it, either. Mary thinks I'll be "more like myself" when I'm completely rested; and I've let her think so. She talks about "battle fatigue" and "shell shock." Of course no doctor recognizes "shell shock" any more; and the Army doctors seem to find me in perfect condition.

My parents know the story. They feel sorry for me, but their attitude is that I've made my bed. "For better, for worse" covers everything, they believe. But Mary is young. She would marry again if we were divorced. Is it fair to keep her tied to a man who will never give her the sort of love she deserves? Or does that idea come out of my own wish to free myself? I am sure of only one thing,—that we should never have been married two years ago. I was too young; and the past two years have changed me too much. What is the decent solution?

J. S.

Has He Outgrown Her? Actions Leave Doubt

DEAR J. S.: If you would translate into action, in relation to Mary, your assumption that you have become a mature man in these past two years,—and for that reason have completely outgrown your 19-year-old boyish infatuation with her,—then Rule 1 of behavior is bear in mind that you are her husband; and she is your wife. And that you are no longer primarily and essentially your parents' son. This is the only attitude that can lead to a right solution of the problem presented by your overwhelming conviction that the marriage was a mistake.

You are worsening your confusion of mind a thousandfold, and seriously crossing up your integrity, in blending disloyalty and deceit with loss of devotion, by (1) trying to fool Mary into believing you still care, while (2) simultaneously letting your parents in on the secret of your involuntary revulsion to her, and accepting their compassion as surface ointment for your distress. That is not manly behavior. That is kid stuff,—of the most ignominious mama's boy variety. (Incidentally, it is rather to your parents' credit that they profess to be keeping hands off the problem; though whether this is Machiavellian diplomacy, designed to teach you a lesson you'll remember, for flouting their will in the first place, is an interesting question.)

Seek Right Solution By Light of Truth

IN MY OPINION, the decent thing to do, in the circumstances, is to be honest with Mary about your feelings. Tell her the story of your change-of-heart much as you have told it here;—when the realization began to dawn, how you at first refused to "think" it and then tried to hide it, hoping her presence would make you feel differently (and as before), etc. And how every day with her, since your return, only makes you more sure that the marriage was a mistake,—at least, for you. Tell her you can't keep up the bluff any longer; that the truth must be faced together, for both your sakes; and some solution sought, in joint discussion.

Ask her what she wants to do,—whether she wants a divorce now, or would prefer to let the situation ride until after the war. Tell her you believe she ought to free herself as quickly as possible,—since you are convinced you never can give her the love she deserves; and feel, moreover, that you are committing a kind of sacrilege against her, living with her in these circumstances. Though painful scenes may ensue, the fundamental tone of your relationship with Mary will automatically improve, and assume reality and significance,—regardless of the form of the final outcome,—if you put your cards on the table for her to study, and insist on dealing with her in terms of truth. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

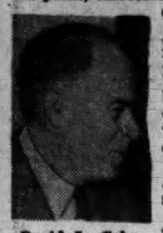
David Cohn Springs Surprise Talks, Too

"IN WASHINGTON . . . a secret is a rumor heard in retrospect. Washington gossip is self-conscious and stilted. If it were unconscious, it would be immoral. If it were subtle, the hostess wouldn't get the point; therefore it generally turns out to be a compromise between eloquence and epilepsy."



David L. Cohn

Such pistol-packing epigrams as those accented David L. Cohn's speech last night at the Women's National Press Club dinner. Having promised to tell "all about love" that he left out of his highly inclusive best-seller, "Love In America," the author used that only as a springboard from which he plunged into a wise and witty discourse on American values as they come to light in wartime Washington.

As anybody who has read his books will tell you, Author Cohn has quite a flair for discussing heavy subjects in light accents.

Just as his "Love In America" was an engaging treatise on popular taste—rather than love—in America, so his speech before the petticoat press last night gayly dismissed the "all about love" phase and launched in its stead a highly enlightening coverage of entertaining topics ranging all the way from woman's place in the world (he thinks she might do better to devote her time toward making life more pleasant and acting as a kind of civilized agent in a universe now too much concerned with gathering and spending) to the manner in which far too many advertisements offer magical ways to perfection and happiness.

Neatly seasoning the entire speech were frequent references to subjects touched on in his tome "The Good Old Days," which plays up American values as indicated in the old Sears & Roebuck catalogues.

Mr. Cohn speaks as entertainingly as he writes, and—as evidenced in the brief open forum that followed his talk—he is trigger-quick on comebacks; is never at loss for an apt answer. The general concensus last night was that his speech was one of the most successful performances ever given before the press women.

AN INTERNATIONALLY known celebrity, who achieved fame as a statesman in prewar Europe, is one of the most important current visitors to Washington, and probably will be one of the outstanding men at the world peace table, was the center of attention at a late afternoon party here yesterday.

I refer to Belgium's former Prime Minister, Dr. M. Paul van Zeeland, and the fete given in his honor by his nephew and the latter's wife, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos L. van Bellinghen, at their home on Davis st. Dr. van Zeeland is here for a very brief visit before returning to the New York office of the Belgian Commission for the Study of Postwar Problems, of which he is chairman. Happily his trip here coincided with the hosts' third wedding anniversary, and the party celebrated both.

Among the guests were all members of the Belgian Embassy staff, many others from the Diplomatic Corps and the State Department, and several other friends made by Dr. van Zeeland on his official visit to Washington in 1937.

"HE WRITES that he goes places . . . but he doesn't say where. He writes that he meets people . . . but he doesn't say who."

That quote might come from almost any Army wife whose husband is now on the fighting front, but it just happens to be lifted from a letter written by Mrs. Omar N. Bradley, wife of the lieutenant general who was recently named senior commander of the American ground forces in Europe. Mrs. Bradley added that she didn't mind, however; she was glad enough to get any kind of letter from her husband, and she didn't bother too much because they weren't as packed with newsy detail as they might be.

Mrs. Bradley makes her home at the Thayer Hotel at West Point, where she plans to stay until her husband comes marching home. She likes it there for two reasons. She feels her husband can visualize her better at the Point because they have lived there together so many years; and the Point is near Poughkeepsie where daughter Elizabeth is a senior at Vassar.

The Bradleys were hometown sweethearts back in Moberly, Mo., where there were so many Bradleys Omar's mother decided to do something drastic about her offspring. That's why she named him Omar. Incidentally, he was at West Point with General Eisenhower and was graduated in 1915, and has spent a lot of time in Washington since then. His most recent visit here was back in October when he came to give the President a first-hand report on the Tunisian and Sicilian campaigns.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, chairman of the National Symphony woman's committee, and Mr. Howe will have as their guests for the concert Mrs. Tracy Dows, a former member of the orchestra's board of directors, and her daughter, Mrs. Deborah Dows. Following the concert Mr. Menuhin will be entertained by Mrs. Truxtun Beale at her residence, Decatur House.

Banquet to Be Held

Envoy's Widow In Capital For Brief Visit

Back in Washington, where she once was a prominent figure in the diplomatic colony, is Mme. Slavko Grouitch, widow of the distinguished diplomat, Dr. Grouitch, who represented his country, Yugoslavia, here when it was known as the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, several years ago. He died in 1937.

Mme. Grouitch remained in Yugoslavia until the last possible moment, escaped from Belgrade under bombfire and took refuge in Switzerland. From there she came to the United States aboard the Excalibur, and now makes her home in New York. Born Mabel Gordon Douglas of West Virginia, she first went abroad as a very young girl to study art and ancient biblical and classical history.

She has made several lectures since coming to this country. Her first lecture was made in this country at the home of Miss Emily Tuckerman, aunt of Walter Tuckerman, in Stockbridge.

An old friend of the Walter Tuckermans, Mme. Grouitch was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel by Mrs. Tuckerman. Rodgers Underlines Slogan

Loew Executive Exhorts Diners; News and Gossip of the Theater

THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY'S slogan for the Fourth War Loan, "A Bond for Every Seat in Every Theater," will be more than lived up to, if the exhortation of William F. Rodgers, vice president and general manager of sales and distribution for Loew's, Inc., is heeded.

WALTER PIDGEON

Host to the industry and the press in the Washington territory at luncheon yesterday at the Statler, Mr. Rodgers got down to brass tacks in the matter of individual effort on the part of every motion picture man or woman in the matter of unremitting effort in behalf of the war effort, at whatever cost of personal sacrifice. In stirring words, he pointed out that it was not so much a duty as a privilege to safeguard the country in which the cinema has attained an importance and an artistic and economic integrity not approached anywhere else on the globe.

In furtherance of the same thought, he appealed for universal and continuous showings of the governmental films conveying information and messages that Uncle Sam wishes imparted to the public through the OWI.

To one who has attended "trade luncheons" for so many decades that he is afraid to count them, yesterday's conclave was in the nature of a revolutionary innovation. It was more a patriotic rally than a film sales convention. Mr. Rodgers had nothing to sell on this occasion but his company's good will, which stands in need of no high pressure promotion in this area—or any other, so far as I know.

It was, oddly enough, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, an alumnus of the industry, whose brief talk preceded Mr. Rodgers', who paid the picture business its greatest tribute. Mr. Walker expressed the view that the industry has yet to gain the public and governmental recognition it deserves as one of the greatest instruments of art, science, culture, education and entertainment known to the modern world. It was his thought also that the time has come for Hollywood and all it represents to stop "turning the other cheek" for all manner of abuse from all manner of unworthy adversaries and demand the respect and the independence to which its achievements entitle it. This also is a new note in the voice of the industry that should have been sounded long ago.

Also on the dais with the speakers were Lowell Mellett, formerly of the OWI; Abram F. Myers, of Allied Exhibitors; Stanton Griffis, A. Julian Brylawski, president of the MPTO of the District; Carter T. Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's; John J. Payette, Warner Brothers zone manager, and others of note. Rudolph Berger, division manager of M-G-M, was the smooth and fluent toastmaster.

Parade Gets Under Way

Walter Pidgeon, currently co-starring with Greer Garson in "Madame Curie" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater—just as he did in "Mrs. Miniver"—will be one of the popular Hollywood stars who will come to Washington for the President's Birthday Celebrations, it is announced by the Birthday Committee. Pidgeon is the first of a dozen screen celebrities who have promised to be present in the Capital on January 28 and 29.

The stars all will be here by Friday and be guests at a banquet in the Mayflower that night, later appearing at midnight shows at the Earle, Capitol and Howard Theaters. The following night, January 29, all the stars will attend the Birthday Balls, making two appearances at the Shoreham, and one each at the Statler, Wardman Park, Willard, Mayflower and Washington Hotels.

And that reminds me. Tickets are now on sale for those Friday midnight shows, beginning at 11:30 p. m., at both the Earle and Capitol. The bills will consist of the combined stage shows of the two houses, plus added attractions and appearances of all the Hollywood luminaries. Prices of admission to either house will be $2.20 for the orchestra and $1.65 for the balcony. The entire proceeds, as goes without saying, will be devoted to the fight against infantile paralysis. Tickets for either the Earle or Capitol may now be secured at any Warner Brothers or Loew Theater in the Capital.

What Goes On

Following the two-week engagement of "Kiss and Tell," the attraction at the National, also for a fortnight, beginning Sunday night, January 30, will be "The Student Prince," with Everett Marshall, Frank Hornaday, Detmar Poppen and Laurel Hurley heading the cast. Seats for this engagement will go on sale at the box office next Monday morning.

Most of the picture houses likewise are celebrating two-week engagements. "Flesh and Fantasy," at RKO-Keith's; "Madame Curie," at the Palace, and "What a Woman!" at the Earle, all will hold over—unless all signs fail. "Jeannie," at the Little, having already smashed all attendance and money records, will take over the long-run championship by sailing blithely into its tenth consecutive capacity week.

The repeaters are not so bad, either. This weekend "Lost Angel," with Margaret O'Brien and James Craig in the top parts, will break out at Loew's Columbia, and "Destination Tokyo," with Cary Grant and John Garfield, will take over the screen at the Metropolitan. So now you know.

Personal aside to Dorothy Slaven and Margaret Cotton: Yes, the Charles Meyer singing in Harry Anger's stage revue at the Earle is the organizer and conductor of that all-girl orchestra.

Luncheon-Day-Deadline Note

Goodgoshamighty! How did it ever get that late?

AURORA

newest firebrand to reach Hollywood from South America, who will make her American screen debut in Universal's "Phantom Lady," starring Ella Raines, Franchot Tone and Alan Curtis. Aurora's full name is Aurora Miranda. Yes, a sister of Carmen, the Brazilian "bombshell"

Actual Recordings

Hollywood—Because the time difference between Europe and Los Angeles is so great that local radio stations always make transcriptions for rebroadcasts at more convenient listening time, Paramount can use the actual voices of the King of England, Prime Minister Churchill and Adolf Hotler in history-making speeches as important parts of scenes for "The Hour Before Dawn."

This filmization of W. Somerset Maugham's novel starring Franchot Tone and Veronica Lake takes place during the first year of the war in England. Each of the three memorable speeches has been carefully woven into the plot and recordings of the actual speeches are being used.

Director Corrals BroadwayBeauties

Hollywood—Getting the drop on glamour—that's what Director George Sidney accomplished when he signed seven beautiful New York showgirls for roles as campus queens in "Mr. Co-ed."

Snaring this shapely septet was no mean trick. Brought to Hollywood by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Margaret Adams, Lucille Casey, Bonnie Edwards, Alice Eyland, Mary Ganly, Ann Lundeen and Peggy Maley were slated for parts in the forthcoming musical, "Zeigfeld Follies." While the girls were awaiting start of production on the picture, Sidney lost no time corraling the beauties for his Technicolor comedy.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ONE LOBBY you don't hear much about, but which is among the most effective in Washington, is the title companies' lobby. With the help of the insurance and bank lobbies it has held up millions of dollars supposed to be paid to people thrown out of their homes when the Government took over land for Army and Navy camps.

The Government cannot yet pay many of them under the old, slow-moving system of clearing titles to property. For more than a year the Justice Department has tried to change this system, but the title lawyers and title companies object. They receive nice, juicy fees for clearing titles, and they don't want new legislation which would take away those fees—even in wartime.

Result is that, in many cases, people who were moved off their land months ago to make way for Army and Navy camps still are unpaid. It is one of the great and little known tragedies of the war.

In a total of 120,000 tracts of land taken by the Army and Navy, about one-half, or around 70,000, still are involved in pending condemnation cases. These cannot be unsnarled under the old-fashioned system of clearing titles.

The Justice Department estimates that approximately 300,000 people, equal to a city about the size of Portland, Oreg., are completely homeless yet still unpaid by the Government as a result of the lobby's tactics.

Steps in Cumbersome Procedure

HERE IS WHAT HAPPENS when the Government takes over a large land area. The first step is to appraise a farmer's or home-owner's property. This is easy, and the Government has been more than generous in these appraisals, especially to small landowners.

Second step is to clear title to the land. This is the difficult part. Under the present law, the Government cannot pay until the title goes through the cumbersome routine employed by the title companies. For one thing, the companies do not have sufficient men to do the job quickly. It is like asking the corner grocery stores to feed the Army.

Also the Government, under the present law, is required to spend millions of dollars for getting these abstracts from title companies. When the abstracts do finally come in, Justice Department officials say they are frequently imperfect or full of exceptions. For instance, one word may be missing in the deed. Then the Government has to get the deed corrected or waive the exceptions.

Finally, the Justice Department has to submit the title to the courts and get approval for payment of the money to the landowner. A total of 104 million dollars is tied up in courts right now.

Meanwhile, families have been sitting in tobacco barns at New River, N. C., having been moved off their farms to make rom for the Marine Base. Or they have been living in Hell's Bottom, near Arlington, Va., since their homes were taken by the Army on March 3, 1942.

For instance, when the Navy took over the land for Camp Peary near Williamsburg, Va., home-owners were moved out on September 8, 1942. And it was not until well into 1943 that title evidence was cleared through the slow-moving routine channels, and money started coming in to those forced to move out.

Reform Bill Blocked

TO SPEED up this procedure, hard-hitting Assistant Attorney General Norman Littell persuaded members of Congress to introduce legislation permitting the Government to clear titles by posting notices and publishing notices in local newspapers. If no other claimant laid claim to the property within 30 days, the Government could then clear the property and pay the owner.

It was at this point that the title-company lobby swung into action, supported by the insurance companies and the bankers. J. O. Bratt of the American Bankers Association, H. L. Smith of the American Title Association, Horace Russell of the United States Savings and Loan League, together with the Mortgage Bankers Association, have been the chief operators against the bill.

Senator Byrd of Virginia, no radical, has been one of the chief supporters of the reform. Impressed by the terrific hardship suffered by residents of Quantico, Va., when the Government condemned land to enlarge the Marine Corps Base, Byrd has vigorously fought the title-company lobby—so far unsuccessfully.

Wheelbarrow Keeps Planes Flying

The story can now be told of how the lowly wheelbarrow is keeping Allied airplanes in the sky.

There was a time when BEW officials were tearing their hair out because they couldn't get wheelborrows, and without wheelbarrows there wouldn't be enough industrial diamonds, with the result that Allied air operations would be hampered all over the world.

Manufacture of planes depends on industrial diamonds for sharpening precision tools. Principal source of diamonds is the Belgian Congo. But when Congo mine operators learned how many diamonds United States industry wanted, they said it was impossible.

Finally, they said it might be done if they could have 15,000 wheelbarrows, a steam shovel, 80,000 feet of sluicing trough and vast numbers of picks and shovels.

The Board of Economic Warfare passed the request along to WPB, which promptly said, "Impossible. Nobody is making wheelbarrows any more."

This was in the days when Dakar was threatened, and nobody knew what might happen to Madagascar. In fact, all Africa might fall to the Axis, and with it the world's richest source of industrial diamonds.

BEW officials grew desperate. "We must have wheelbarrows!" they cried. Weeks passed. Finally, a wheelbarrow plant which had been converted to "war production" was reconverted to produce what it had been producing before, and wheelbarrows began coming off the assembly line. The first 5000 were shipped at once, then 15,000 more. But this was 18 months after the first request.

When the crisis was on, the subject was a deep secret, but now so many industrial diamonds are coming out of the Congo that the British Diamond Trading Co., which has a profitable monopoly in the business, is fearful that peace will find them with a price-depressing surplus of diamonds.

But profit or loss, the machine tools were made and the airplanes are in the sky.

Greek Actress Not Recognized on Bus

Hollywood.—Katina Paxinou, First Lady of the Royal Greek Theater, who made her American film debut portraying Pilar in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," one of the great roles of the screen, is really the woman nobody knows, even in Hollywood.

Recently Paxinou, who is a very choice eyeful minus her make-up, was riding on a bus to downtown Los Angeles. Two women sitting across from her looked at a photograph of Paxinou as Pilar in the daily paper.

"Can you imagine being like that in appearance?" one woman asked the other. "Why, she must weigh 200 pounds," exclaimed the other, looking closely at the picture.

Paxinou never said a word.

LEONARD LYONS

Out of the Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Jan. 18.—Two critics, in reviewing Maxwell Anderson's "Storm Operation," made sarcastic comments about the British officer's uniform worn by Bramwell Fletcher. They described it as spectacular, and indicated that it seemed inappropriate... Fletcher's outfit, including trench-coat, cap and insignia, belonged to Captain Haynes of Britain's Eighth Army, who is a friend of Maxwell Anderson. This uniform, re-tailored to fit Fletcher, was worn in the two-year pursuit of Rommel. It was soaked in the waters of the Mediterranean. And the bullet-hole in it is a real one—from a bullet fired by one of Rommel's Afrika Korps.

The Dublin censors are so intent upon maintaining their neutrality that they censored a photo of the Quiz Kids, sent there by a Government agency. The censors ruled that Quiz Kids might be interpreted as a nickname for Quislings, and the photo was banned.

One youngster replied: "Your last book, about Penguins, told me more about Penguins than I wanted to know."

Sir Thomas Beecham, the noted, colorful conductor, was discussing musicians. "People sometimes say that a fine musician, or instrumentalist, is a bore when he comes to tea," said Beecham. "Well, it's all right for musicians not to think. When musicians begin to think, they go wrong. A musician should be and usually is a clairvoyant creature, almost in a trance condition, receiving messages that nobody else hears, and having visions denied to all others . . . And why should a musician be clever in a drawing room? Never before has the world been so full of clever people—and never before has the world been in such sad state."

The family of one of the innocent characters in the Lonergan murder case became alarmed at seeing their boy's photo in the paper. They therefore retained Margaret Carson, the press agent, to keep his name out of print. The young man's name received no mention, thereafter, and Miss Carson received a nice fee. All she had done was to warn him: "Don't go to the Stork Club, Morocco or 21" . . . Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, of the N. Y. CROSS AND DUNN, suave and diverting twosome who've been starred at Washington theaters for times without number, will open at the Troika on Friday . . . This leaves only one to two nights more for enjoying the inimitable Frank Fay and his merciless but hilarious vivisections of current hit parade songs.

Carole James is the new nightingale with Carr's orchestra at the Madrillon. You should remember her captivating voice and pretty person from Crossroads where she sang with Ralph Hawkins' band...

STATLER'S HAPPY BIRTHDAY. A monumental birthday cake made in the image of the Statler was trundled into the Embassy Room last night. Manager Fred Kenny cut it with a scimitar while everyone stood and sang "Happy Birthday" to the Statler, now one year old. During this remarkable 12 months the hotel has presented Hildegarde, Cugat, Carmen Cavallero and Morton Downey to an admiring public.

LISTENING PLEASURES. "Sleigh Bells," Russian song from World War I, is a rare item offered by Gregor Titoff's orchestra at the Balalaika. . . . Sarate's "Zigeunerweisen" is being played masterfully by the Heintze Brothers at Restaurant "823." . . . George and Terry of the Anchor Room give a lovely warmth to "My Heart Tells Me." . . . The Rainbow Room's Roy Kyser is still top man when it comes to vocaling "Begin the Beguine." . . . "One Alone" is among the finer numbers tenored by Salvatore Lupica at Ciro's. . . . Joan Stanton of the King Cole Room gives delicate modulations to "Speak Low." . . . "Estrellita," played softly as a morning breeze by Sasha Lucas at the new Latin Quarter, is the most entrancing of violin solos.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Grain futures on the Board of Trade developed firmness today, a fair recovery movement getting underway at the start that at one time lifted rye and oats prices a full cent before selling attributed to profit-taking and hedging trimmed the gains.

Wheat was the first to show disinclination to follow the rally, which was due to lack of pressure rather than any widespread buying and prices generally held within a narrow range in quiet trade.

Wheat finished ¼ to ½ higher than the previous close; May, 1.69¼; July, 1.67⅜; oats and rye were ⅛ off to ⅜ higher; May, 77⅛ and 1.28⅛@1.28¼, respectively, and barley was off ⅛ to ¼; May, 1.20½.

Range follows:

	Open	High	Low	Close
Wheat—
May	1.69¼	1.69⅜	1.68½	1.69¼
July	1.67⅛	1.67⅜	1.66½	1.67⅜
September	1.66⅞	1.67¼	1.66¾	1.67
December	1.67½	1.67½	1.66¾	1.67⅜
Oats—

Seaboard Railway Reorganization Plan Goes to ICC

By the Associated Press

The Seaboard Air Line Railway Co. yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve a plan of reorganization which already had received the approval of the U. S. District Courts for the Eastern district of Virginia and the Southern district of New York.

The plan calls for total capitalization of $196,870,000, of which $44,370,000 would be fixed-interest debt having total annual fixed charges of $1,746,000.

Total fixed and contingent debt provided by the plan is $96,870,000, with charges of $6,321,000 annually before dividends.

The remainder of the capitalization consists of $15,000,000 of 5 per cent preferred stock, $100 par value a share, and 850,000 shares of common stock, no par value, but figured at $100 a share for purposes of capitalization.

Out-of-Town Draft Appeals Found Faulty

Up to one-half of the occupational deferment cases submitted for review by the D. C. Selective Service Board of Appeal from out-of-town boards in the past few weeks have been reported here incorrectly, Director William E. Leahy said yesterday.

According to a recent amendment of Selective Service regulations, outside boards must forward lists of reclassifications here when the registrant is employed in this area, but Leahy said at least 50 per cent of the men involved in the first returns to be considered are not actually Washington residents or employes.

A typical instance, Leahy added, is a man serving at sea with the merchant marine, who lists the service's headquarters here as his address. Reports on Government workers, whose official headquarters are in Washington but who are working elsewhere, are also being sent here incorrectly.

Returned to Original Boards

In all instances, the cases are being referred back to the original local boards.

About 10,000 occupational deferments granted by boards outside this area have been reported here for reconsideration, according to estimates of Selective Service officials, who declared that it would be several weeks before the new files can be properly weeded out and compiled.

John C. O'Laughlin, coordinator of the D. C. Board of Appeals, estimated that the three local appeal panels had already considered about 300 such cases. He said the majority had been returned to the outside boards because tthe men were not Washington employes or because of incomplete information.

Two Appeal Panels Formed

O'Laughlin was unable to state exactly how many occupational deferment cases of this type had been reviewed by the local board during the past two weeks, but indicated the trend of the decisions is in favor of the out-of-town boards' stand.

Meanwhile, to handle the increased business brought on by the new regulations, two more appeal board panels have been created, Director Leahy announced yesterday. The new groups will meet with O'Laughlin within a few days and are expected to begin work next week.

Appointed members were:

Group 4: Paul B. Cromelin, lawyer; J. Raymond Hoover, lawyer; Francis X. McGovern, physician; Albert L. Wegener, labor member, and John H. Wilson, a member of the Disstrict School Board.

Group 5: Bowdoin Craighill, lawyer; Clark G. Diamond, businessman; Dr. Henry C. Macatee, physician; Edward J. Hillock, labor member, and Frank Coleman, professor at Howard University.

Haircut Prices Are Uncontrolled, OPA Head Says

Price Administrator Chester Bowles in his weekly radio broadcast last night pointed out that about the only other items not under price control are antiques, haireuts and permanent waves.

Establishing ceilings for antiques has been declared "impractical," and OPA does not have the legal right to control prices on haircuts and permanents at the present time. Although they are in cost-of-living index as "basic" to wage earners, they also are classified as "personal services" and so exempt.

Personally, the price administrator gets peeved when he has to pay $1.25 for a haircut—as he admitted at his last press conference—but legally he has no more bargaining power than the girl who buys a $10,000 coat.

Rail Reorganization Plan Protest Filed

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Modification of the reorganization plan of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railway was sought today by a group of adjustment mortgage bondholders headed by D. A. Park, a vice president of the Manufacturers Trust Co.

The committee said it filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission a petition objecting to the three-year moratorium on common stock dividends and participating preferred stock dividends and criticized the proposed retirement fund of the plan.

Amer. Home Products Figures in New Merger

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Negotiations have been completed for the merger of the 77-year-old food company of P. Duff & Sons, Inc., of Pittsburgh, with the American Home Products Corp., the latter company announced today.

Purchase of the Duff firm was arranged through an exchange of capital shares with the American Home Products Corp. exchanging 30,000 shares in the deal.

In 1939, American Home Products purchased the Harold H. Clapp Baby Food Co., and last year took over the G. Washington Coffee Refining Co.

Bert C. Farrar, Handwriting Expert, Dead

Bert C. Farrar, 78, Government handwriting and spurious document expert, whose testimony helped send Bruno Hauptmann to the chair in the Lindbergh case, died Monday, at Orlando, Fla.

FARRAR

The nationally-known authority on inks, paper, coins and handwriting was with the Treasury Department for 47 years before retiring in 1935. During that time he is credited with having saved the United States millions of dollars in detecting attempted frauds and forgeries.

During the Lydanne conspiracy case at Rockville just before his retirement, Farrar identified a note received by a man charged with conspiracy to commit murder as one written on a typewriter in another defendant's office.

Mr. Farrar entered the Government service during the administration of President Benjamin Harrison and worked with his father, Bernard G. Farrar. After his retirement he moved to Daytona Beach, Fla.

He spent the last days of his life writing and occasionally accepted private work. He became ill about a month ago and died at an Orlando Hospital.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Isabelle Seitz of 351 Parkland pl. se.

Charles B. Brewer

Charles B. Brewer, 73, who retired 10 years ago after 30 years' Government service as special attorney for the Navy Department and the Department of Justice, died yesterday at the home of his son, Dr. MacFarlane Brewer, 4222 Oglethorpe st., Hyattsville.

Mr. Brewer, a long-time resident of College Park, was a native of Montgomery, Ala. He came to Baltimore as a young man and was a graduate of the University of Maryland Law School.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. in St. Andrew's Church, College Park. Burial will be in Greenmount Cemetery, Baltimore.

Survivors, in addition to his son, include his wife, Mrs. Helen Brewer; two daughters, Misses Margaret and Virginia Brewer, all of Hyattsville, and four sisters, Miss Mary Brewer, of Washington; Misses Anne and Margaret Brewer, of Anniston, Ala., and Mrs. T. B. Walsh, of Louisville, Ky.
